PRINTED DAILY, BY F. DELAUP.
St. Peter-Street, between Bourbon & Royal.

NEW ORLEANS:
FRIDAY, JUNE 5, 1829.

From the London Morning Journal, of April 20.

Trieste, April 5.

The number of the French troops that remain in the Morea has been stated at 6,000. A commercial letter received here from Constantinople, and dated the remain 10th of March, says: "A few days ago a Turkish frigate and a corvette were going to enter the Bosphorus by night, but were mistaken by the garrisons of the castles at the entrance for Russian, and so severely injured by a violent cannonade that it was necessary to send the steam-boat to tow them into the harbour. M. Jaubert continues to have conferences occasionally with the reis-effendi. Preparations are making in the hotel of the English legation for the reception of an English ambassador, who is shortly expected. It seems that the Russian fleet will really blockade Candia and Alexandria, in order to hinder the landing of troops and provisions as well to Candia as the Dardanelles, especially as it is affirmed that the Egyptian fleet is to go to Constantinople, in order to act, during the summer, in the Black Sea, in conjunction with the five ships of the line, two frigates, four corvettes, and twelve brigs, now in the harbour of Constantinople.

We learn by the captain of an Austrian vessel that Redschid Pacha left Janina at the beginning of March, and is gone to Constantinople. The Albanians were still in a state of insubordination, and Redschid Pacha was obliged to leave his son to keep them in awe. The same captain saw off Zante a Greek flotilla under admiral Miaulis. The Greeks are said to have gained a victory over the Turks in Lavidia.

Egina, March 7.

On the 4th of February the Greek squadron obtained considerable advantages over that of the Turks in the Gulf of Ambracia, the latter being obliged to quit the gulf, having lost two vessels which were captured by the Greeks. On the 9th Feb. the Greeks recovered the superiority in Botia; they put to flight Mahomed, the new pacha of Lidadia, and Omer Pacha, who are come from Thebes to attack them. They took from them 200 prisoners and three standards, on which is painted the hand of the prophet. These standards are considered as sacred by the Turks, and always defended with the greatest valour. Since this event the Turks have remained in the fortresses which they still hold, and the Greeks are masters of the country.

Brussels, April 17.

The second chamber of the States General met yesterday to hear the report of the central secuion on the law relative to the press, but the president announced that there was not a sufficient number of members present, and that, therefore, the report should be printed on Thursday next, and followed by the discussion of the proposed law. Notice to be sent to absent members, and the report to be printed and distributed among the members.

Berlin, April 12.

The Odessa Journal contains the following news. On the 24th of February (March 8) Cononel Leders, with a battalion of the 37th regiment of chasseurs, was sent against the village of Tschavellaby, on the left bank of the Kamtshik, which was occupied by a detachment of the Turkish troops stationed at Kyorefrikoi. The colonel surprised that post, killed nineteen of the enemy, and took five prisoners. Those who fled perished in the Kamtshik. On this occasion we had only three men wounded.

According to the accounts of the prisoners the Turkish force at Kyorefrikoi is under the command of Kirdjild Jussuf Pacha, and consists of 600 infantry, sixty Arnauts, 300 cavalry, and three cannon. General Rudiger reports that a division of three battalions, seventy-five cossacks, and two cannon, under the command of Colonel Roslatsch, had been sent against a detachment of Turks that had occupied the village of Ekislscho, when the colonel arrived on the 24th of February, with his troops, at this village, consisting of 300 houses, he found it abandoned both by the enemy and the inhabitants. He set it on fire, brought off sixty oxen, and returned the next day to Bazardjik. Prussian State Gazette, April 13.

PORTSMOUTH, April 18—The Gazette of last evening announces the arrival of a despatch from Commodore Collier. C. B. The same means by which the despatch to the Admiralty was conveyed has brought us letter from the Sybille, of which the following is an extract. It appears that, on the 5th instant, the commodore, in the Sybille, made a capture of another vessel, with 450 slaves on board:—

"His Majesty's ship Sybille, Prince's, Bight of Benin, Feb. 12, 1829.

"On our arrival this morning we found here our tender, the Black Joke, and her pize, with 466 slave. The prize is a Spanish brig from Lagos. They fought one hour and twenty minutes. we had two midshipmen and four men wounded; they had fifteen killed, thirteen wounded. In such a resistance it was scarcely possible for the whole of the slaves to escape danger, and unhappily some of them were killed. The affair has been a most gallant one, and I never saw a vessel more severely cut up than the Spaniard. On the 6th instant we captured a beautiful Brazilian brig, with 405 slaves on board. There is a Spanish slaver, of 730 tons, on the coast of Whydaw, which mounts 20 eighteen pounders on her main-deck, 4 long nine pounders and 2 carronades on her quarter-deck, and 2 nine-pounders on her forecastle, in all 32 guns, and is fitted to carry 1,200 slaves. She has 170 picked men, besides officers. The captain has been heard to declare that he understand our quarter deck and forecastle guns are below, and that if we intercept him he will not be taken without exhibiting a trial of his strength.
