☞ We are in the midst of autumn, but if we consulted the temperature and not the calendar, it might be imagined that we were still in mid-summer. The heat continues to be intense and oppressive, the thermometer ranging from 89 to 92 during the hottest part of the day. A slight improvement is perceptible towards sunset, and the evenings begin to be somewhat breezy and refreshing. This, however, is our normal summer weather. Autumn is usually the most delicious season of the year—cool, comfortable and healthy, with all the freshness and bracing influence of a Northern spring. We shall have it ere long, and it will doubtless be ushered in by a rain and thunder storm. Meanwhile, the city is filling up with returning travelers who complain feelingly of the absence of the genial temperature they are wont to enjoy, and who [illegible] console themselves by the reflection that it must soon be felt, and that their anticipations are not disturbed by the most remote apprehension of an epidemic.

☞ The Locofocos of the First Congressional District in Iowa have nominated Wm. Thompson, convicted of running away with, and concealing, the poll books in one of the election districts, as their candidate for Congress. Daniel F. Miller, who was, by this act of Thompson, defrauded out of his seat, is the Whig candidate in opposition to him. Delazon Smith, Locofoco, is also a candidate, put in nomination by the people of his county. The Locofoco papers are down upon him in real Bentonian style; he is called a "traitor," the "great unwashed," the "Shetland Poney," and the "lost Tyler man." These epithets have all been put in use against him since the last election; about that time, he was a tolerably clever fellow.

WHY WE REJOICE.

The Mobile Tribune has asked the reasons for rejoicing at the passage into laws of the measures known as the adjustment bills. A correspondent of the Mobile Advertiser thus particularly answers the query:

Because one George Washington, in his farewell address to the people of the United States, spoke to them in this wise: "It is of infinite moment that you should properly estimate the immense value of your national Union to your collective and individual happiness; that you should cherish a cordial, habitual and immovable attachment to it, accustoming yourselves to think and speak of it as the palladium of your political safety and prosperity, watching for its preservation with jealous anxiety, discountenancing whatever may suggest a suspicion that it can in any event be abandoned, and indignantly frowning upon the first dawning of any attempt to alienate any portion of our country from the rest, or to enfeeble the sacred ties which bind together the various parts."

The Union of which he speaks had been menaced. His glorified spirit in the mansions of bliss cannot but rejoice over its preservation, nor we, who dared to call ourselves his children, believing that the spectacle will be a pleasing one to him—intend that he shall see us rejoice. We rejoice that his country has been saved the anguish of beholding the [illegible] and the pity of civil war, rent by faction and treason, and the sport of the diplomacy of the monarchs of Europe.

We rejoice, as the friends of republican liberty in the United States, at the overthrow of [illegible] conspiracies against the unity of the Republic, it being manifest to the dullest comprehension that from the conflict that would [illegible] upon a separation, when the reign of the law should be superseded by that of the cannon and bayonet, we could scarcely hope to emerge with our liberties unimpaired, or indeed [illegible] condition than as subjects of our [illegible] We therefore rejoice at [illegible] preservation of public and individual liberty.

We rejoice that the conflict which has so long agitated [illegible] country has terminated [illegible] From the day of the Missouri [illegible] We have endeavored to [illegible] "You shall not legislate on this subject, we will not [illegible] Congress, we denied total non-interference both in the States and territories. It is a question which alone concerns the people of the State when admitted into the Union, and which they only have the right to settle." The [illegible] every one of the adjustment bills. We would [illegible] been much better pleased had California [illegible] a slaveholding State been secured in [illegible] territory [illegible]

[illegible] We should not be disturbed. We have every [illegible] for planting our institutions upon the Pacific, which we could have were California a territory. I need not inform intelligent Americans, that if the people of a territory or State wish to have the institution of slavery, or any other institution, established among them, they will have it, and that if they are opposed to it, they will reject it, and that Congress is [illegible] powerless to influence [illegible] decision [illegible] question.

We rejoice over a triumph of principle for the South.

We rejoice most heartily at the rejection of [illegible] doctrine recently broached in Pa[illegible] the duty of Congress to legislate upon this subject, thus seeking to surrender to the enemies of our institutions the [illegible] which they have so pertinaciously asserted during nearly half a century, and which the South has so gloriously and successfully defended. Can there be a man in the South to whom it is not clear as the sun at noonday, that we, in the principle of non-intervention remains inviolate, and it will ever remain so if the South is true to herself; our institutions are forever safe, and that the opposite doctrine of the exclusive friends of the South would place them in immediate peril? The only question that has ever really been at issue has been the claim of the right to legislate upon the subject. The devotion of the aforesaid exclusive friends to her real interests is beginning to be questioned.

We rejoice with an exceeding great joy at the signal overthrow of the combined forces of Garrison, Giddings and Abolition—a combination having for its object, as evinced by its votes in Congress, the dissolution of the union of these States by means of the defeat of all measures looking to an honorable and satisfactory settlement of the questions dividing the country, and having a tendency to restore peace to our councils.

These, Mr. Editor, are a few of the reasons (though by no means all of them) which induce the friends of the South and the Union to rejoice at the passage of the adjustment bills—We have endeavored to be explicit—to convey our ideas in the plainest possible language, that the class [illegible] special edification we write may clearly comprehend us. Yet we are constrained to acknowledge that we entertain little hope that their mental constitutions are of a character to enable them to appreciate or even to understand most of the reasons that we have adduced. How then can we hope to be understood when we tell them that we rejoice because we can "hail that banner not yet torn," beneath whose folds we mean to live and die; because our hearts have a strange habit of beating with a responsive throb to the notes of "The Star Spangled Banner" and "Yankee Doodle," because our happy country can now pursue her bright career unchecked by the machinations of domestic treason, the glory of the good and the true among the nations of the earth, and the terror of the doers of evil to republican liberty. We rejoice with humility, yet with a joy unspeakable at the renewed evidence furnished by the late events, that the shadow of the wing of the great Jehovah is not yet withdrawn from "the sacred soil," that notwithstanding our many sins as a nation, His especial guardianship is still vouchsafed to us as of yore, and that it suits not His purpose in regard to us, that the star of "the last hope of the world" should go down in darkness and despair.

CHRISTOPHER NORTH.—A correspondent of the Presbyterian gives the following account of a visit to Professor Wilson:

This morning, I had the pleasure of an interview with the celebrated Christopher North, of Blackwood. He lives in a very handsome house in Gloucester Place, in the new town. I was shown by the servant into a room, the walls of which were closely hung with pictures. I had been seated but a few minutes when the professor appeared—a tall, strong built, noble looking man, with large chest, fine forehead, shaggy hair, and great whiskers.

He received me very kindly. I apologized for intruding upon him, but he soon set me at ease by his agreeable and lively manner. He is now considerably advanced in years—perhaps nearly sixty—and yet there are all the sprightliness of manner and energy of mind which one would expect in youth or middle age. He inquired about our American literary men—said that Mr Bancroft had spent some time with him not long since—that Mr. Bryant had also called on him, but being absent he did not see him; spoke of Prescott, and the merit of his histories; of Longfellow, and the finish that characterized his poems; mentioned that he had just received two volumes from Mr. Dana, and seemed quite at home in our American literature. He inquired about the length of my voyage, &c. He seemed to think it not impossible that he might yet take a trip to the Model Republic; though, shrugging his shoulders, he said with a smile, that it was not a pleasant theme of contemplation, the possibility of being drowned in the sea. After having some further conversation on miscellaneous subjects, and assuring him that few would receive a kinder welcome in America than he, should he ever favor us with a visit, we parted.

THE CARDENAS AFFAIR.

One consequence has resulted from the skirmish at Cardenas, in May last, when the people refused the liberty tendered them by Lopez and the Patriots, with a unanimity not in the least anticipated—which is nothing more and nothing less than an epic poem, of which some flaming Cuban has been delivered, and a portion of which we find in the New York Cronica.—From the specimen, the poem is tal cual, as the Cubans say—so, so. It might have been much better, and might have been much worse. It is at a considerable distance, we think, behind the noble poem of Ercilla, The Araucanos—which Mr. Prescott rather underrates—and a good deal of Spanish poetry besides; but it is brimful of heroism and patriotism, and not very complimentary towards the Universal Yankee Nation, whom it charges with ambition, and with an over-fondness for annexation. On this subject we have the following apostrophe:

Si ese es, Yankees, vuestro flaco,
me huelgo de tanto afan,
y que es infalible el refran,
la codicia rompe el saco.

Cuba es rica, grande, hermosa,
no hay en los mares tal perla;
os gusta y quereis cogerla—
[illegible]

Solo hay pues dos condiciones
para la nacion Cubanos
[illegible]

Ser esclavos y estrangeros, hombres de raza española
[illegible]

Que aunque de santa lealtad
no fueran eterno ejemplo cada Cubano es un templo de honor y de dignidad.

Y ese honor que en mil crisoles
se ha probado de mil modos, nos hace exclamar a todos
antes que nada, Españoles.

The following is a literal prose translation of this indignant effusion, during the penning of which we doubt not that the author felt all that he said or sung; for the Cubans are not deficient in that characteristic of insular populations everywhere, that leads them to have a most exalted opinion of themselves. To be a Spaniard and a Cuban, he believes, and most religiously, is the very pinnacle of all mortal, social, and political dignity:

If this is your aim, ye Yankees! (annexation) then I rejoice at your troubles, for it is an infallible saying, that avarice bursts the bag.

Cuba is rich and great and beautiful. In the wide seas there is no such pearl. She pleases you, and you wish to grasp her; but she is a rose with thorns.

There are two alternatives for the Cubans: They must be Spanish citizens, or slaves to the Saxons.

Slaves of the foreigner! Men of the Spanish race! Your cheeks redden at the baseness of the proposal.

Even though you were not a standing example of holy loyalty, still every Cuban is a temple of honor and of dignity.

And this honor, which has been tested in a thousand crucibles, and in a thousand ways, makes us all exclaim—First of all, We will be Spaniards!

A GIRL IN BOY'S DRESS.—A gentleman doing business in the city, in returning to his home in Charlestown, fell in with a fair looking boy on the bridge, whom he suspected might not be what his dress indicated. The seeming boy was accosted to know if he wished employment—he replied that he did, and accompanied the gentleman home at his request. Communicating his suspicions to his wife, the lady succeeded in getting the confession that the apparent boy was really a girl in boy's clothes.

Her name she gave as Josephine Caroline Bryant, 17 years of age, from Bangor, Maine. Her parents died by cholera last year, and having no relatives alive, except a brother in France, she resolved to obtain means to reach him. She came to this city about three weeks ago, and subsequently went to Lowell, where she remained two weeks at different places. Having received a letter from her brother, she came from Lowell yesterday, exchanged three calico dresses, and one silk dress, an open work straw bonnet, [illegible] Cotton [illegible] France. A LARGE FAMILY. A CHALLENGE TO KENTUCKY.—We had the pleasure of being present on Monday last at a family gathering in the town of Concord, which exceeded all that we have ever seen, even at a New England Thanksgiving. The patriarch of this numerous tribe was Mr. James Davis, a soldier of the revolution, now eighty five years old. His wife, who is just eighty, retains the vivacity [illegible] age, and on this occasion moved among her descendants with the sprightliness of one of her grand children. There were present at the tea-table seven [illegible] sons and daughters-in-law, thirty grand-children [illegible] grand-children-in-law, and eleven great-grand-children, in all sixty-five.

But this is by no means the whole family.—[illegible] eight grand-children, seven great-grand-children, and eighteen [illegible] thirty-four persons, were absent, making ninety-nine living members of the family. Besides these, thirteen have died—making the whole number on the family record, one hundred and twelve. Of these 85 were direct descendants of one pair. But the most honorable fact in this patriarchal household remains to be recorded. There is not an old maid or a bachelor among them! Not only is every one of them married, but every grand-child who has reached the age of twenty-six years. Is there any thing in Kentucky that can beat this.—New Haven Journal.

MARINE DISASTERS.—Among the recent marine disasters, we notice that of the schooner H. N. Gambrill, Capt Bradford, from Baltimore, for this port: she was run into on the night of the 12th, by the schooner S. C. Davis, from New York, and had her bowsprit carried away and bulwarks stove, besides sustaining other damage. She returned to Baltimore for repairs.

Also the schooner Ocean, Captain Brown, hence for Baltimore, which put into Hampton Roads on Saturday last, having lost her foremast.

Also the schooner Triton, Capt. Graham, hence for Baltimore, which put into Norfolk on the 11th from stress of weather.

Also schooner James Smith, Williams, New York, bound to Savannah, put into Norfolk in distress—encountering a gale on Saturday night last, from SE to N NE 75 miles SE Cape Henry, lost foresail, flying jib, jib boom, damaged other sails and rigging, &c.—Savannah Rep.

SOMNAMBULISM ON THE SOUND.—An interesting case of somnambulism occurred on board the steamer Commodore, on Tuesday night, during her passage from Stonington to New York. The subject was a female, who, to the astonishment of the steerage passengers, left her berth in the ladies cabin, and proceeded to pace the deck. She was attired in her sleeping habiliments, and being tall and thin, presented one of the most ghostly sights ever seen. Her appearance among the "second" passengers, who were piled up in all sorts of ways upon the boxes and bales of merchandize, created great excitement.

The "boot black," who was sitting near the door of the engine-house, as she approached was frightened to such a degree, that he would have jumped overboard, but that a fireman caught him in his arms. Indeed the alarm among the negroes was very general, and they scooted before her like sheep. The somnambulist's sleeping career was shortened abruptly in consequence of her stumbling over a box, when she awoke from her dream and again returned to her berth. She was a woman of about 35 or 40 years.—Boston Courier.

MUTUAL ADMIRATION SOCIETY.—The Boston Post thus capitally hits off the literary coterie that make or mar Boston Belles-lettres fledgelings:

The mysterious power that controls, unites and inspires our ideas, is an eccentric element, a sort of telegraphic wire between congenial minds, upon which thought sometimes runs with lightning speed, from brain to brain, until the circuit is completed. An instance of this kind was exhibited at Ticknor, Reed & Field's bookstore on Saturday. A member of the Mutual Admiration Society entered the store, and took up a volume of Tennyson, just published in beautiful style, remarking, "Tennyson has done for Friendship what Petrarch did for Love." In a few minutes another member of the society was heard to say at the corner of School street, "Tennyson has done for Friendship what Petrarch did for Love." A gentleman at the Athenæum observed to a third member of the Mutual, that Ticknor & Co.'s edition of Tennyson was well gotten up, when the reply was, "Yes. Tennyson has done for Friendship what Petrarch did for Love." This astonishing coincidence coming to the knowledge of an individual, he proceeded immediately to Ticknor & Co.'s to relate it, when the communicating fluid became erratic, the Mutual wire lost control of its course, and it was so greatly diffused that in the course of an hour upwards of twenty different gentlemen entered the book-store in question, and proclaimed that, "Tennyson had done for Friendship what Petrarch did for Love."

A NOVEL PASSENGER.—While the sloop Hannah and Mary, Captain Carll, of Bridgetown, New Jersey, was lying off our port on Wednesday night, and the captain and crew were sleeping in the cabin, a monster sturgeon, seven feet in length, jumped in through the cabin windows, breaking sash, windows, &c., and disturbing, most unexpectedly, the slumbers of the fatigued crew. For a time all was wonderment and alarm among the slumberers, not knowing the character of their new passenger, but in dread lest some vessel had run into them. After a while, however, a light being procured, the sturgeon was captured; and, his passage not being paid or berth secured, he was seized upon as contraband, and afterwards sold by the captain to pay damages.—Wash. Republic.

AN ARMY OF NEGRO WENCHES.—The King of Dahomey, in Western Africa, has a standing army of eight thousand blacks, of whom one-half are women. His sable majesty is an ally of England, and it was by an application for percussion caps, wherewith to supply his female guard, that the condition of his army was made public—the petition of the government of her Britanic Majesty proved that this cargo of ammunition might be duly expedited, and added, as a reason for haste that the warrioresses were waiting to start upon an expedition after slaves.

The abolitionists had taken the matter up, and hence the publicity of the details. It is upon his females that the King of Dahomey places the great reliance; they are selected for their beauty of proportions and look magnificently in their barbaric uniforms.

Marriage alone is forbidden to them. In all services requiring desperate hardihood and intrepidity, they are the foremost and most successful. The king takes great pains to preserve his popularity with the Amazons, and they seeming to be too much enchanted with the art of war to have any regrets for the interdiction of regular matrimony, are his most faithful and reliable subjects.—Home Journal.

The abducted chickens were subsequently offered for sale in the Poydras street Market, but the whereabouts of the purloiner has not yet been discovered.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.—J. Moner was examined yesterday before Recorder Genois on two separate charges of breach of trust. In the one instance he is accused by Louise Jillet, with having fraudulently appropriated to his own use the proceeds of a large quantity of garden seeds, and in the other J. Landeville charges him with the misappropriation of $33. Both cases were referred to the First District Court.
