SUGAR PLANTERS.

We expressed the opinion, some days since, that the promised protection was once abandoned by the Congress of the United States, the Sugar Planters would be in a position to the uncompromising spirit of free trade. This opinion was not uttered lightly. The establishment of a tariff, providing a capital of more than [illegible] millions of dollars, will add the fortunes and happiness of a large, most respectable and meritorious class of our citizens, tendered it criminal in a public journalist to trifle with the subject, to attempt to encourage hopes or excite fears founded in delusion. Allowing to every one who holds opposite opinions, the same integrity of purpose that we claim for ourselves, we again assert our serious conviction of the truth of the proposition, that if "free trade" prevailing a position fast hold in Congress, sugar will be the first article of domestic production that will feel its withering and blasting influence.

We have heretofore reviewed at some length the record of the "Democratic Association of Louisiana," promulgated last week under the most imposing forms that could be given to it, and the resolutions of the democratic meeting at Banks' Arcade, held a few weeks ago, in both of which the denunciation of a protective tariff was regarded as a cardinal principle of the party. That the denunciation so formally avowed and subsequently so unanimously approved embraced the duty upon sugar we had no doubt; but lest there might be some delusion about it, the Republican, the organ of the free trade party, directed attention especially to the sugar interest as coming within the interdiction of free trade. The editorials of that paper, as well as the communications published in its columns, have taken the broad, open and ingenuous ground—neither are anything leaden the meaning of the articles of faith we are endeavoring to extenuate their application to any particular interest. As indicative of the purposes of a large portion of the Democratic party, we hold the Republican to be orthodox and authentic, and we find, even here in Louisiana, that the sugar duty meets a powerful opposition from that party.

The wing meeting, held at the St. Louis Exchange, taking the obvious meaning of the democratic resolutions and shadowing the doom of the sugar planter, adopted counter resolutions condemning the tariff of 1842 as high and oppressive, and avowing the principle that the consuming was always been at the expense of the producer" as a cardinal principle of our creed. The effect of a repeal of the duty on foreign sugar was powerfully exhibited by the wing resolutions, one of which condemned in terms of regret measures the free trade doctrines of our opponents as applicable to the planting interest of the state.

To escape the effect of the antecedent resolutions therefore published and applauded by their party, the democrats, at a meeting held in the St. Louis Hall Room, last Monday, "amended their hold" and passed several resolutions, preceding the construction put upon the former resolves of their party—containing terms the pungency of which cannot be mistaken, though in fact it was more applicable to a large portion of their own party than to ours. One of these resolutions is in the following words:—

"Resolved, That the attempt of the whigs to create dissension among the agricultural interest of the Southern states, and of the democratic party, on small issues, is one of the very the reduction of the duties upon sugar has ever been brought by the democratic party, and we will ever be ready to meet the issue, whenever it may be presented, and we will ever be ready to meet the issue, whenever it may be presented, and we will ever be ready to meet the issue, whenever it may be presented
