IRELAND.

DUBLIN, April 17. Through the exertions of the lord may or of our city, who issued a timely proclamation in order to prevent public illumination on the event of the defalention of George the Fourth from the principles of his revered father and the protection of the state, as it was handed downs to him, we were spored from much riot and confusion; but, as in a former instance, when Lord Angleses thought fit to issue his flat against the meetings in the south, the affociation thundered for their commands, which were obeyed with unexampled afacrity so now, the " friends of civil and reli gious liberty," as they style themselves par excellence, must also interfere; and lo! their proclamations adorned every rubic post" around the city.

To prove what power the association or its leaders had and have over the peasantry we have only now to look what ourages and riots are of daily and nightly occurence. There is no fair takes place but the old feuds of faction break forth. At Mullingar, a few days since, one man was killed, and severa abused in a me-t dangerous manner At Enniskillen, last Friday, a fair took place, and in the evening a desp rate riot ensued, several being serious v in jured. Through the interference of the Protestant rector much bloodshed wis everted. During the time that the fatal dow was pending, of which O'Connell hid early, intelligence through some bishop's wife's waiting maid, althoug at the time he was laughed at, they kept themselves quiet, but it seems, now that they are no longer what they called bondsmen," thet may act in any minner agreeable to them, and cut their old capers all over again. Another outrage, which evinces the s'infling Courier recommends noblemen and gentlemen to reside. It is worse than ridiculous to suppose that any thing but the dominant spirit of Popers will exhibit itself in a more hydra-like shape every day. > LONDON, April 20. We would aim ist venture to foretel, with certainty, that, ere many months clock, at the City Marshal's Office, elapse, the government of the Duke of Wellington will become the by-word reproach to all persons who are in any way connected with it. A cost gious withering appears to seize all that bask under his political influence. Huskisson servilely sought his favor. He was fostered for a sufficient time, to afford my. Within the last week another scene has been preparing calculted to give rise to as loathsome feeling as any that have been created during the disting period of apostacy, we have just passed through.

We reckoned amongt the consistent opponents of the last measures the duke of Gordon, lord Lowther, and Sir John 'ETABLISSEMENT deMile. It now appears they have been pluying an understood game of consistency with the noble duke, for no sooner is the measure carried than the offices they held are again held by them.
