SPANISH EXPEDITION.—It appears from the opinion of many well informed persons of this City that the Expedition preparing at Havana against the Mexican States and which is to sail about the end of this month will not debar at Yucatan as we announced some days since, but will direct its first attack against Veracruz, taking immediate possession of the city, thereby to intercept all communications between it and the Castle of St. Juan de Uloa, which fortress is but poorly provisioned if we may credit the statements of persons lately arrived thence; consequently, if the Mexican government would not have taken measures to remedy the evil it is much to be feared that the fall of the Castle will soon follow that of the City.

This information, if true, would afford a fine field for the interprise of persons engaged in commercial speculations.

The Secretary of the Treasury has issued a notice to the Attorneys and Marshals of the United States, requiring their vigilance in the detection of persons engaged in manufacturing or passing spurious money in imitation of silver coin, which are extensively circulated in some of the Western States, and which, therefore, reasons to suppose, will be gradually introduced in other part of the United States. Two of these dollars which were received in Nashville, and which are supposed to have been fabricated in Arkansas, have been examined at the mint. The value of one of them was ascertained to be 40 and one of the other 31 cents. The Director of the Mint, in his report, remarks, that "the manner in which these counterfeiters are executed renders them extremely mischievous in our currency. By a chemical process, the external pellicle is made to assume the appearance of good silver or rather to be really good; better it may be than standard so that an experienced eye could not detect the fraud by inspecting the external surface merely."

PIRACY.—It was erroneously stated in this and other papers yesterday that in the case of the persons brought here in the Danish sloop of war, from St. Croix, under a charge of piracy, the Grand Jury had dismissed the bills. On the contrary the Grand Jury came into court this morning with bills against Wm. Brandtzen and James Rogers for piracy, and against John Anderson as an accessory after the fact for receiving goods, knowing them to be piratically taken. N. Y. paper.

CHARITY, WITHOUT OSTENTATION.—An unknown individual recently enclosed one thousand dollars in a note signed Charly to the treasure of St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum, Philadelphia, in aid of its funds.

New-York, May 29.

The brig Ariel at this port, from Matanzas, the first day out from that port was chased by two very suspicious looking schooners, one of which was propelled with thirty sweeps. After a chase of six hours, finding it impossible to overtake the Ariel they hauled their wind. There had not been any U. S. vessels at Matanzas for the week previous to her sailing. A passenger also informs us, that a brig of about 200 tons, well manned mounting a twenty-four pounder a-midships, and sailing under Dutch colors had been lying in the harbour several weeks: a French sloop of war, determined to investigate her character had watched her movements day and night; she had attempted to get out of the port several times, but in every instance being closely pursued by the sloop of war, had returned.

TUSCALOOSA, May 8.

Destructive Hail Storm.—We have never witnessed a more furious and destructive storm of hail, wind and rain than the one by which Tuscaloosa was visited on last Saturday evening. Indeed we have conversed with many young and old, and all concur in saying they never before in this or any other country, by land or sea, beheld the like. If the earth with all the heavenly bodies was swung loose from its orbit, the elements could not exhibit more fury, violence and commotion. Night had not come on, and yet it was impossible to see hail way across the street. It may be truly said, "the wind roared and the torrents tumbled from the hills." The hail stones were not so large as some we have heard described; but the quantity that fell in twenty minutes is red with hail in an average depth of four inches; and in places it was drifted together in large bodies, from seven to nine feet deep. It came first from the north, but veered round with great rapidity to the east and south, destroying every thing before it. On the north side of M. Ewing's tavern, not a pane of glass, nor even a piece as large as a dollar was left in the sash the damage done to the southeastern part of the building was little less. Mr. Ewing's loss, however was not more complete than that of his neighbors. All tender vegetation within the range of the storm was destroyed. The forest is disrobed of its verdure, and the ground as thickly covered with green leaves as in autumn it is with the yellow. The trees of the orchard have lost their fruit, leaves, and even their smaller boughs. In the fields and gardens, every thing that had peeped above the surface has been beaten into the earth. The injury to wheat crops, &c. is irreparable.

The extent of the hail storm has not we understand, been very wide, having been as bad or worse here than elsewhere; though the wind has done extensive injury in prostrating the timber and fences.

DEATH AND SLEEP. AN APOLOGUE.

FROM THE GERMAN.—As hand in hand the Angel of Sleep and the Angel of Death were traversing the Earth, evening gently stole upon them and they sat down amid a quiet scene, while the distant village bell died away upon the air.—Tranquil and silent, according to their habits they enjoyed in confidence the beauty of the scene. At length the Angel of Sleep rose from his mossy seat and scattered from his hand the seed of slumber; the evening breeze bore them to the cottage of the fatigued labourer. Sweet sleep embraced the inhabitants of the village from the grey head that leaned upon the staff, to the nursing in the cradle; and sickness forgot its pains, and affliction its grief, and poverty its grief, and poverty its cares. His duties thus discharged, the benevolent Angel of Sleep returned and seated himself again beside his more serious brother. "When the day draws," said he, with joy, "men will bless me as their friend and benefactor; what delight to do good unseen and in secret: how happy are we the invisible messengers of Heaven, how blest is our peaceful destiny."

Thus spoke the lovely Angel of sleep. The Angel of Death looked upon him with silent anguish, and a tear, such as immortals shed, glistened in the orbit of his lugubrious eye—"Ah!" cried he, "why can I not like thee enjoy the exquisite pleasure of gratitude? Man calls me the enemy and the disturber of his delights."

"My brother," replied the Angel of Sleep, "when the just shall rise from the tomb will he not recognise thee as his friend and benefactor, and bless thee with eternal gratitude? Are we not brethren, sent forth by the same kind parent?" He paused, and the countenance of the Angel of Death beamed with radiant smiles—the two genii again embraced each other with fraternal affection.

Distressing affair.—On Saturday last an occurrence took place in the northern part of the town of Montgomery, Orange co., which has excited in that vicinity, the deepest sensations of regret and sorrow. The following circumstances are derived from a gentleman who went to Newburgh for the coroner and attended the Inquest.

Charles Crist, one of the witness stated that between one and two o'clock on Saturday afternoon, he was with Abraham Moule the deceased, at Mr. Rapalyer's tavern, opposite the store of Mr. Mitchell, when Moule said "I will go over to Mitchell's and tantize the old Scotchman." He went over and Crist followed. He soon got in conversation with Mitchell, and began to be abusive and called him a liar. Mitchell ordered him out of the store. Moule refused. Mitchell said if he did not go out he would put him out. Moule replied, "If you will come round here (from behind the counter,) I will put you out." Mitchell then seized the wooden bar, which secures the window and struck Moule on the side of the head. Moule fell partly but recovering round Mitchell repeated the blow.—Moule fell and recovered again.—Mitchell then came round took hold of Moule and was pushing him out of the store when Crist observed, "Stop, Mr. Mitchell I believe the man is hurt." Mitchell let go of the man and said, "God forbid that I should injure any man seriously." Crist led Moule home to his own house which was about half a mile distant; they went up stairs, when Moule undressed himself went to bed and slept. From that sleep he never awoke. He died about eight o'clock in the evening.

The statement of Mr. Crist was corroborated by three other witnesses. The head of the deceased was opened by Dr. Egar in company with two other surgeons; who stated before the Coroner.

The Jury, which consisted of twenty-four, returned a verdict that "the deceased came to his death by a blow or blows given by James Mitchell."

We learn that Mr. Mitchell went himself to inform the brother of the deceased of the distressing circumstances; that he had manifested the utmost contrition for the deed and the deepest sympathy for the distressed family. He gave himself up to the officers and has been admitted to bail. His trial will probably take place at Goshen in October. [Uster Palladium.]

AN EXTRAORDINARY FAMILY.—The Notices Ambrosians of the last Blackwood, opens with the following description of a household of great variety: Tickler.—I paid a visit to-day, North, to a family which has something extraordinary in its constitution. The lady of the house has been married four times, and the gentleman of the house four times as all the seven marriages have been productive, poor may conjectures the general character of the interior.

North.—What may be the population? Tickler.—Not so immense as various. I should not think it exceeds a score, from what I saw heard, but it is most diversified.

North.—Patchwork. Tickler.—The lady's first husband was a Cockney, and there are twins as like as pear, which is indeed the only description of which they are susceptible. Her second, of course, was an Irishman, to whom she bore a couple of semi-Catholic cuds—both boys—bullet-headed, and with faces like—you have seen him, I believe—that of Burke, the murderer, with grim, but not with ferocious expression, decisive mouth, and determined eyes and brows, which, though rather agreeable over a glass, yet when frowning in an angry pique, or a throbbing match, must have been far from pleasant, these promising youths rear present assistants to Dr. Knox. Caroline then married a Highland clergyman—very far north—and of that connexion the fruit was three heather-legged animals, apparently of the female sex—hair not absolutely red, but soxy-fairneticked cheeks—eyes of the color of "three times skimmed sky-blue" milk—papa's buck teeth—what seems very unaccountable, hair-lipped all; and, though their mamma asserted smilingly that they were fine growing girls, of such a ser shape, that I venture to affirm, that for the two last years they have grown about as much as the leg of that table.

They have, however, I was given to understand, finished their education, and one of them had very nearly played us a tune on the piano. To her present lord and master my friend, with whom I was in love a quarter of a century ago, has presented four productions, of which the one in rounded trowsers, with enormous feet and legs, is said to be a girl, and the three in fancy kilts—in compliment, I suppose, to the father of the other brood—boys, but so wishy-washy, that their sex seems problematical.

North.—What is the total of the whole? Tickler.—Eleven—by that side of the house—in Cockney's, Irish, and Highlanders half-and-half—and in Lowlanders entire.

North.—By the other side of the house? Tickler.—One Dutch girl born at the Cape—very round, and rather pretty—cown-looking, and on the eve of marriage—two tall and not inelegant creatures, seemingly Chinese; but in fact by the mother's side Hindoos—and four mulattoes, of which two, boys, would look well in livery, with a cockade in their hats as captain's servants—and two girls, would be producible on wagons in the rear of a marching regiment: It being a coarse day, the whole family were at home, sitting on chairs, and sofas, and stools, and the carpet, and what not; and I must say I never saw, North, a set of more contures, or a richer scene of connubial felicity in all my life.

North.—Rich? Tickler.—Their income is under three hundred a year, at this hour they don't owe twenty pounds.
