NEW-ORLEANS,
WEDNESDAY (MORNING,) MARCH 16, 1831.

New-York, Feb. 26.

The following endorsement is on the Philadelphia Post Bill of Thursday:—"The Portmanteau containing the mail from Washington city and south is missing." All the letter bags as far south as Washington were duly received.

A bill has passed both houses of the Maryland Legislature, providing for the construction of a Rail Road from Baltimore to Washington, by the Baltimore and Ohio Rail Road Company. There is a bill now before the Senate of the United States, authorizing the extension of this road within the city of Washington; upon the passage of which, the construction of the Road depends. As it is a project of great utility, and likely to repay the Company, we hope it may pass, whether its object be to facilitate the transport of merchandize or of memorials. It will no doubt bring business to Congress, if not to the corporation of the city.

It will be recollected by our readers that not long since Mr. Rhind, a Delegate from the American Republic to Constantinople, brought out, on his return to this country, four beautiful Arabian horses, as a present to the government. A clause in our constitution disallows the acceptance, on the part of our functionaries abroad, of any presents. If such are received and brought home, they are deposited in the archieves of the Secretary of State. These four footed individuals therefore, have been feeding here at the expense of the Confederacy. On Tuesday last the President submitted to the National Legislature the query, "What should be done with the Arabian horses, brought from Constantinople?"—Congress are soon, we believe, to sit in deliberation upon these quadrupedal subjects. They cannot on any terms receive these beasts; they had better be trotted back to the Sultan at Byzantium. We shall find, else, that four horses can resolve themselves into a great and dear Mare. (Pal. Gazette.)

FROM MARACAYBO.—We have received, via St. Thomas, Maracaybo papers to Jan. 4th. From an extraordinario of that date we translate the following:

The mail from San Cristobal has brought important news, which we hasten to lay before our compatrons, in order to show anew the persistence of our enemies, the cruel ferocity which is manifested in the interior of New Granada, and the imperious necessity of marching immediately to redeem our brethren, and exercise the wretches who have profaned our sacred territory.

"Four hundred and fifty men, includinf several veterans and many recruits have assembled in Rosaria de Cucuta. It was said in Cucuta, that a reserve of 700 men, chiefly recruits, had been formed in Socorro.

"A guerrilla party in the mountains to the North of San Jose, contends as it is also against the Bolavian troops. Their commander, it is said, is one Pardo, a native of Maracaybo.

"Gen. Justo Briceno had in Socorro more than 100 prisoners in dungeons, who were soon to be shot. A letter from an officer in that place who was on the point of being shot, along with seven of his companions, says that the execution was suspended in consequence of orders received from Bogota." [If there is any truth in this last paragraph we have no doubt that it is greatly exagerated.—Eds. J. C.]

People of Merida! Hasten to arms, guided by the God of justice; destroy the sad vices of tyranny; maintain the rights which have been given you by nature and guarantee by the constitution.

One of the papers contains an "Address of the Sovereign Congress of Venezuela to the Venezueleans," which is a report as to shew their readiness to unite with the governments of the Centre and South in forming a Federation. We translate the following paragraphs:

Yes, Venezueleans! The Congress, after serious meditations, all directed to secure your happiness, have deemed it advisable to establish federal relations. Without such relations, would it be easy for two people to adjust the differences with calmness, who, after being united in one nation, and forming, as it were, but one family, should become totally disconcerted, without a single point of contact.

Venezuela, by forming a union with Cundinamarca and Quito, elevated itself to the honorable rank of nation, and was recognized by some of the principal governments in the civilized world. Could we divide (with the other fragments of the Republic) this noble satisfaction? And are we sure that by becoming perfectly disconnected, we should not lose this high distinction? No; Venezuela knows how to value such inestimable privileges. She knows on the one hand, that fidelity in maintaining compacts is inseperable from the honor of those who make them; that such a change would considerably diminish her reputation,—and this consideration, alone, she regards as extreamly important.

Such, Venezueleans, are some of the considerations, among others not less weighty, which have induced the Congress to manifest their sentiments in favor of a system which you have already hinted at in your pronunciamientos.'

We expect with confidence that the work will be consummated, and that Colombia, after a short season of clouds, will re-appear, under the federal system, breathing new life,—a life of happiness and enduring glory; for, divided into States which may be called sovereign in promoting their own welfare, it will possess, in addition to what it enjoyed before, the fruits of this [the federal] government, whose blessings seem to be reserved for the people of America. (N. Y. Jour. Com.

We gave on Wednesday an extract from a letter published in the Journal du Havre, purporting to be written by a correspondent of that paper in Paris, which said:—

"I know from a good source, that the reunion of Belgium with France has been resolved upon in cabinet council—that we shall have a war for which France will make preparation, and for which she is even now prepared. The instructions given to M. de Mortemart, our Ambassador at Russia, are to this effect."

A careful review of the facts which might urge France to take this step, have induced us to think it probable. We know that the French people and the popular branch of the chamber of deputies, are in favor of that measure, and as the government appears to stand in some awe of public opinion, we should not be surprised if subsequent news confirmed it; although, from the determined refusal of the King to suffer his son to occupy the Belgian throne, a different opinion might be formed of it. If we treat the supposition upon the ground that the acknowledgment by the five great powers of the independence of Belgium, leaves it free to choose its alliance or form of government, de jure, we shall be met on the other hand by the conditions of that acknowledgment which deprive her of that independence de facto; and the question then is, would the five great powers assent to such an union. We think they would not, for if it is the opinion of France that a French King would offend them, it cannot be assumed that a French government would not. We must reflect that this great difficulty which retards the negotiations of the five powers, is how they shall settle the affairs of Belgium without disturbing the "balance of power," which would inevitably be the result of an unequal preponderence in the direction of her affairs is given by this connexion to either of those powers. They wish to avoid all these difficulties, while they separate her from Holland, so that in case of any future troubles she may be kept in check. Her severance from Holland has disconcerted the scale so carefully balanced at Vienna, and if they do not, virtually, bring her into submission to the old regime, they will compel some course, which may compel France to adopt the conduct now charged upon her. The re-commencement of hostilities is in direct violation of the requisitions of the protocol of the allied powers, which expressly says:—

"The Plenipotentiaries observe that this repeal must be entire, so as to restore the free navigation of the Scheldt, without any right of duties or search, except those which were established in 1814, before the re-union of Belgium with Holland in favor of neutral vessels, and of such as belong to Belgian ports, his Majesty the King of the Netherlands having declared, through the medium of his plenipotentiary, that the vessels belonging to Belgian ports had not been, nor should be, molested, so long as the Belgians should not molest the vessels or property of the northern provinces of the Netherlands.

"The delegates shall add, that if the Belgian troops have not retreated to the said positions by the 20th of January, the five powers will regard the rejection of their demands on this point as an act of hostility against them, and reserve to themselves the adoption of such measures as they shall deem proper to cause the engagements entered into with them to be respected and executed.

"The Plenipotentiaries, moreover, renew, in the present protocol the formal declaration, that the entire and reciprocal cessation of hostilities is placed under the guarantee of the five powers, that they will not allow the renewal of them on any supposition, and that they have formed the unchangeable resolution to obtain the accomplishment of their decisions founded upon justice, and their wish to preserve to Europe the blessings of a general peace."

Now, "his Majesty, the King of the Netherlands," has contradicted those declarations by subsequent acts of hostility, and which his official journal declares he intends to persevere in, till he has realized the objects in question. "His Majesty" has probably received assurances of aid from another quarter. We mean Russia—which assurances might make it necessary to go to war upon the plan of the protocol, and preserve to Europe the blessings of a general peace." And this, we imagine would leave Belgium into the arms of France, who is in the dispositions of the Comte Beurnonville, and who would not feel justified in suffering Prussia to be invaded by the German confederacy, as appears about to be the case, because she resisted Dutch aggression. It depends, in a great measure, upon what counsels France loses the freedom of choice in Belgium. If the counsels that right entire, public opinion, will compel the measure. And then we shall have peace or war very soon. Probably the latter. For we rather incline to the opinion of the Parisian writers. "When war shall burst forth" says the journal Constitutionel) with M. Lavocat, "it is probable that we will not leave remain in the fortresses Hum—endeavour them to be appointed to turn their agains for us; but a war all kings be carried to any other place than Vincennes."

SWITZERLAND.

LAUSANNE, Jan. 4, 1831.

Revolutions have now taken place in every part of this country, but not a drop of blood has yet been shed to stain a reform, which has been brought about with perfect calm and regularity.

Some of the Cantonal Governments have accepted the wishes of the people, others have ceeded to the wants of the times, and have thus kept the reign of aristocratical privileges within bounds. In a few months all the new constitutions will be in full force, and in the meantime the Swiss will the rest with hope, if not confidence. The Cantons so speedily have given the most positive instructions to their Deputies to the Diet, that they should not oppose any reforms or changes which the people in their respective constitutions or their Cantons; and accordingly the Diet, from its first sitting, admitted the principle of the Cantonal Sovereignty, and the acceptance of their right of sovereignty, but refused to alter their constitutions, and to organize abuses which might be pointed out by the Representatives of the people. Let us hope, therefore, that in a few months our Switzerland will be reasonable. In point of national strength she will be greatly improved—her cannons will be guaranteed by unanimity of opinion and should she be called to take up arms, the sound of the drum will be answered by shouts of joy.

FRANCE.

PARIS, Jan. 14.

We have some new, as information is received from Switzerland, respecting the state of Bale, dated the 5th, 7th, 8th of January. The communes of the Canton had risen against the capital, demanding an equal share in the representation, and in the composition of the committee the city was in a state of siege, and it was feared that the peasants would attack it. The gates of the city were closed on the 7th, towards the evening of which day both parties appeared to be resolved to combat with vigor. The National Guards of France had placed posts along the frontier, to prevent any violation of the French territory.

In the evening of the 7th a Proclamation drawn up in very moderate terms, was addressed by the citizens to the country people, from which a happy result was expected.

MARRIED—On the 9th March, at New Orleans, Mr. LUKE VIGNEAU, of the City of Montreal, to Miss APOLINE FORREST, eldest daughter of the late Mr. Jobet; both of this city.
