The Ravel family and corps de ballet, arrived at Havana in the 'Empire City,' and had commenced an engagement at the Theatre de Tacon, for one month, when they will leave for New Orleans. The 'Empire City' brings 360 passengers, the mails, and $36,000 in gold dust on freight, besides a large amount in the hands of the passengers. The Roussett family came passengers from Havana. BATON ROUGE, Jan. 19.

Last night, at 8:30 o'clock, as Lieut. Nickle was returning home, he was attacked near the garrison gate by four men. In the struggle he was knocked down twice, and three shots were fired at him. One shot took effect in his face, wounding him slightly. The [illegible] opened an old wound, which bled profusely. He was taken insensible to the Garrison House, when it was discovered that he had been robbed of important papers [illegible] and money. He is up this morning, but quite ill from the severe handling he received. The police are on the track of the assassins.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP.—We copy the following from the correspondence of the Charleston Courier:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.

Our foreign relations are now without a cloud. The Spanish difficulty, complicated as it was, settled. The Prometheus affair is settled by the disavowal of the British Government. The questions with England in relation to affairs in Central America are about to be finally and satisfactorily adjusted. With the government of Mexico we have yet to arrange the Tehuantepec treaty question, but it seems probable that the Mexican Government will ratify that treaty. It would have been done before, but for the interposition and influence of rival American interests connected with the Panama, Nicaragua and other rival routes.

We are equally prosperous in regard to domestic concerns. A continuance of peace with foreign nations, whatever war may arise among them, will send us onward in a rapid march towards supremacy among nations, without impairing the rights of the several States comprising the nation.

Gen. Lane, of Oregon, appears in his speech at the Jackson festival, to be the embodiment of Western yearnings after territorial acquisition. Alexander sighed because there were no more worlds to conquer—Gen. Lane grieves because there are no more worlds to annex.

General Lane lamented over the narrow limits of this Continent, and was sorry it did not extend westward some two or three thousand miles further. He has partially consoled himself with the prospect of swallowing up some portion of China.

In the Senate, yesterday, Mr. Downs, of Louisiana, made a long speech in support of the resolution to declare the Compromise measures. He vindicated his own position on this subject. He was desirous to make this speech defining his position, as he was about to return home, for the purpose, it was said, of looking after his re-election. There is no immediate prospect of a final vote on the Compromise resolution.

The Hargous award has finally been paid.—The Mexican Board of Commissioners awarded to Mr. Benjamin H. Hargous a sum over four hundred thousand dollars, but the Government stopped its payment, on the ground that Mr. Voss, a partner of Mr. Hargous, was indebted to the Government in a large amount.

Mr. Voss had given the Mexican Government a receipt for one of the instalments of the indemnity that Mexico was to pay to American citizens, under the treaty of 1848. But it appears, upon investigation, that Voss had received no consideration for the value he gave. He received orders on Collectors of Customs which were revoked by the Mexican Government, and were never paid.

The Committee of Ways and Means of the House will report in favor of paying the amount due to French citizens for the seizure of certain French vessels and cargoes in the port of San Francisco, by Mr. Collier, the United States Collector. This subject was mentioned in the message of Louis Napoleon at the opening of the defunct assembly, as one that had been adjusted.

M. Rosas the Mexican Minister, is about to leave his mission and return to Mexico, having been elected Governor of Zacatecas. His successor has been appointed.

KOSSUTH AT WASHINGTON.—From an editorial article in the Washington Republic of the 9th [illegible] at the character of Kossuth's visit to that city—its failures and successes—we make the following extracts:

Of one important fact Kossuth has obviously been assured from the first moment of his arrival, and that is, that his cherished plan of direct intervention in the affairs of Europe did not, and does not receive the sanction of the Government, or of any respectable party in the National Legislature. On this point, and to this extent, his visit has unquestionably been one of disappointment: but the unpleasantness of the circumstance is attributable to the bad taste and judgment of those who led him to anticipate any other result—not to those whose sense of duty prompted them to repel every overture involving a departure from the established policy of the country. So far it is true, as letter writers have said, that Kossuth's visit has been a failure—a failure foreseen and foretold long before his arrival—and one for which no man here can be held responsible.

In one other respect his visit has been a failure. It has called forth no "material operative aid;" it has, as yet, done nothing towards swelling the subscription list of the million loan; it has not tempted colonies of militia to volunteer to lead American legions on the plains of Hungary; and the only vision of fighting men to which it has given rise is that which exists in the fertile brain of Mr. Sweetser, of Ohio. Whether Mr. Sweetser will muster his one hundred thousand heroes, to be reviewed by Kossuth en route to Cincinnati, remains to be seen.

Apart from these circumstances—drawbacks, of course, in Kossuth's judgment—his visit can scarcely be considered otherwise than satisfactory. His recognition by the President, by all the Executive officers, by both branches of Congress, by all classes of citizens, is an honor that would be awarded to no Emperor living, and may well inspire him with hope and joy.—But its significance is not confined to honor, however great. It is an emphatic acknowledgment of a man whose name is to "the gallows nailed" in testimony of the force of his struggle against the unjust sway of Austria. It is an endorsement of the claims of Hungarian nationality—a justification of the principles for which Hungary struggled—and protest against the foul treachery and tyranny by which her people were for the time vanquished and trampled under foot. It is more still, it is an anticipatory declaration, loud and indignant, against future intervention by absolutist powers, and as such will go forth to the world, sustained by the moral force of a people powerful and free. In this respect, Kossuth has received all that reasonable men could desire, and whatever his feelings on other points he will return to Europe fortified and strengthened by the events attendant upon his visit here.

The banquet on Wednesday evening would have been an appropriate termination to Kossuth's Washington experience, not less on account of the catholic, non-controversial tone which pervaded it, than because of the blending of the leading men of our political parties, forgetful of their party differences in their anxiety to evince sympathy with Hungary and its chief.

At the festival by the Jackson Association, last night, Kossuth reproduced an argument in favor of his old idea—"intervention to prevent intervention"—that calls for presenting no material addition however to his repeated remarks on this subject. The most remarkable portion of his speech, and that most likely to excite the wrath of his hosts, is that in which he combats the hostility displayed in this country towards England, and argues in support of an alliance between that power and the United States, as essential to a successful resistance of European absolutism. His remarks on this head will be found to be directed specifically in reply to Mr. Douglas's speech on Wednesday, and in this regard they indicate an essential difference between himself and those members of the Democratic party whose views on intervention generally comes nearest to his own.

FOREIGN CONVICTS.—We are glad to see, among the petitions sent to Congress, one brought forward by Mr. Florance, of Pa., asking for the passage of a law prohibiting the immigration of foreign convicts and paupers. Early in 1850, a vessel of paupers arrived at one of our northern ports, and at a later period of the year was followed by a vessel of convicts from Bermuda. The latter vessel arriving at Baltimore, the Governor of Maryland brought the question to the attention of the Federal Government, which, we hope, will make some regulation that will not militate against the thrifty and honest immigrant, but totally exclude the paupers and convicts that the government of Great Britain seems to be making a systematic effort to force upon us. We do not know what practical difficulties are in the way, but the wisdom of Congress, we feel assured, will devise some plan by which we can be protected from the immigrating hordes of convicts and paupers.—Danville Register.

THE LOSS OF THE MAGNOLIA.—We mentioned yesterday on the strength of a telegraphic despatch, that the steamer Magnolia, from Savannah, for Palatka, Florida, was blown up on the 8th instant, on her return trip. The following letter to the agent at Savannah, furnishes the particulars of this sad occurrence:

DARIEN, Jan. 10, 1852.

Dear Sir: General James G. Cooper, of Florida, a passenger on board the steamer Magnolia, has just arrived at this place with a part of the U. S. mail in a damaged state, and has brought the melancholy intelligence, of the bursting of her boiler. It occurred on Friday, (yesterday) 9th instant, at a quarter past 4 P. M., while lying in the river opposite Mr. J. H. Cooper's plantation, on St. Simon's Island, taking in cotton. The whole of the forward part of the boat was blown out, and she sunk in five minutes afterwards. By great exertions the passengers were all saved, except two in the steerage. The boat is a complete wreck, broken into fragments. Captain McNelty, I am sorry to relate, was blown overboard and has not been found. The bar-keeper and eleven hands belonging to the boat were killed, and the mate, first engineer and ten others, more or less injured. Nothing was saved from the wreck—baggage all lost. Great credit is due to the first steward, who saved the lives of several females.

I have forwarded five mail bags in charge of Mr. Ross, a resident of your city, and a passenger on board the Magnolia. The number of mail bags received from the hands of General Cooper is six, of which one belongs to this place.

Your ob't serv't, A. A. DELORME,

Post Master and Agent U. S. Mail Steam Packets.

We learn, adds the Savannah Republican, from Mr. Ross, who brought up the mails, some additional particulars. The bar keeper referred to in the above letter, is Mr. T. Cody, of this place. The accident occurred while lying along side of a flat, taking in cotton. The boat went to pieces and sunk in a few minutes after the explosion, barely giving time to those on board to get into the flat and the steamer's small boat. Several of the passengers threw themselves into the water and swam to the flat. A lad, name not known, who attempted to reach the shore, was drowned. Mr. Ross, who had parted from Capt. McNelty but a second before the explosion, let himself down on a cotton bale floating by, and with fragments of the wreck managed to paddle ashore. He describes the scene as being one of the most distressing character. In addition to the killed, a number had their arms and legs broken, and others were badly maimed. None of the cabin passengers were lost. According to his recollection, the number of missing was sixteen.

The passengers, including the injured, were taken to James Hamilton Cooper's plantation on St. Simon's Island, where they received every attention from his brother, Mr. W. A. Cooper, residing there. We have not been able to obtain the names of the killed and wounded.

The Welaka, Captain Blakenship, passed on Friday night, and took the mate of the Magnolia, and one of the wounded on to Jacksonville. Mr. John Austin, the first engineer, was badly injured, and it was doubtful whether he would recover. The assistant engineer escaped unhurt.

The Magnolia was built in New York but a short time since, and has been running on the Florida line about one year. She was owned by Messrs. M. A. Cohen, O. A. Wood, Jno. W. Anderson, and perhaps others, in this city, and by Messrs. Rodman & Co. of New York, who manufactured her machinery. She had just been thoroughly repaired and a new boiler put into her, with which she had made only one trip. We are not informed whether the explosion was owing to some defect in the boiler, or to the absence of the proper quantity of water, or to mere accident. Those of the proprietors residing here are among our worthiest and most enterprising citizens, and they have the sympathy of the entire community for their loss. So far as we are informed, there was no insurance on the steamer.

But the most melancholy reflections suggested by this painful calamity are those connected with the family of Captain McNelty. A wife and five children, the youngest less than a year old, are left to mourn the loss of a kind husband and affectionate father to whom they daily looked for every temporal want. Captain M. was one of our oldest and most respectable steamboat Captains, in which position, as in that of a citizen, he was universally esteemed. When the sad intelligence was first communicated to his family yesterday, the scene, as described by an eye witness, was most heart-rending. We trust that a well-directed, and not a barren sympathy, will be awakened in their behalf, which will supply in some feeble measure the grievous loss which they have sustained. We do not live for ourselves alone. The widow and the orphan have special and additional claims upon our sympathy and charity.

Grand Vegetable Banquet to the Potato.

ON HIS LATE RECOVERY.

That highly respectable vegetable, the Potato, being now, it is hoped, thoroughly re-established in health, it was determined by a few leading members of the Vegetable Kingdom, to offer a banquet to the worthy and convalescent root on his happy recovery. The arrangements for the dinner were on a scale of great liberality, and the guests included all the principal vegetables. The invitations had been carried out by an efficient corps of Scarlet Runners, and the Onion occupied the chair. He was supported on his right by the head of the Asparagus family, while Salad occupied a bowl at the other end of the table, and was dressed in his usual manner. The Potato, though just out of his bed, was looking remarkably well, and wore his jacket, there being nothing to mark his recent illness, except perhaps a little apparent blackness round one of his eyes. After the cloth had been removed,

The Onion got up to propose as a toast, the Potato, their much respected guest, commencing cheering. He, the Onion, had known the Potato from infancy, and though they had not always been associated in life, they had [illegible] met at the [illegible] table, and [illegible] times braved together the same broils, and had found themselves often together in such a stew the alluded to the Irish stew) as had brought them, for the time being, into an alliance of the very closest kind. He, the Onion, was delighted to see the Potato once more restored to his place in society, for he, the Onion, could say without flattery, that society had endeavored to supply the place of the Potato in vain. (Hear, Hear.) They had heard of Rice having been suggested to take the place of his honorable friend, but the suggestion was really ridiculous. Risum teneatis amici, was all that he, the Onion, had to say to that. (Loud laughter, in which all but the Melon joined.) He, the Onion, would not detain them longer, but would conclude by proposing health, long life, and prosperity to the Potato.

The toast was received with enthusiasm by all but the Cucumber, whose coolness seemed to excite much disgust among his brother Vegetables. The Onion had, in fact, affected many of those present to tears, and the Celery, who sat next to the Horse radish, hung down his head in an agony of sensibility. When the cheering had partially subsided, the Potato rose, but that was only a signal for renewed enthusiasm, and it was some minutes before silence was restored. At length the Potato proceeded nearly as follows:

"Friends and fellow Vegetables.—It is with difficulty I express the feeling with which I have come here to-day. Having suffered for the last three or four years from a grievous disease which seemed to threaten me with total dissolution, it is with intense satisfaction I find myself once more among you in the vigor of health.—(Cheers.) I should be, indeed, insensible to kindness, were I to forget the anxious inquiries that have been made as to the state of my health, by those who have held me in esteem, and some times in a steam. (A laugh, in which all but the Melon joined.) I cannot boast of a long line of ancestors. I did not, like some of you, come in with the Conqueror, but I came in the train of civilization amidst the memorable luggage of Sir Walter Raleigh, in company with my Right Honorable friend, Tobacco, who is not now present, but who often helps the philosopher to take a bird's eye view of some of the finest subjects for reflection. (Immense cheering, and a nod of assent from the Turnip Top.) Though I may be a foreigner I may justly say that I have taken root in the soil, and though I may not have the grace of the Cucumber, who seems to have come here in no enviable frame—(loud cheering)—I believe I have done as much good as any living vegetable, for, though almost always at the rich man's table, I am seldom absent from the poor man's humble board." (Tremendous applause.) "But," continued the Potato, "let me not get flowery or mealy-mouthed, for there is something objectionable in each extreme. I have undergone many vicissitudes in the course of my existence. I have been served up, aye, and served out—(a smile)—in all sorts of ways. I have been roasted by some; I have been basted by others; and I have had my jacket rudely torn off my back, by many who knew not the treatment I deserved. But this meeting, my friends, repays me for all. Excuse me if my eyes are watery. (Sensation.) I am not very thin-skinned, but I feel deeply penetrated by your kindness this day."

The Potato resumed his seat amidst the most tumultuous cheering, which lasted for a considerable time.

CINEAS, THE EPIROTE.—The allusion of M. KOSSUTH, in his speech of Wednesday evening, to Cineas, the Epirote, required (says the Republic) some of his hearers to turn to their classical dictionaries. There they learn that Cineas was a Thessalian, the friend and minister of Pyrrhus, King of Epeirus. He was the most eloquent man of his day, and reminded his hearers of Demosthenes, whom he had heard speak in his youth. Pyrrhus was wont to say that "the words of Cineas had won more cities than his own arms." After the battle of Heraclea, he was sent on an embassy to Rome with proposals of peace from Pyrrhus; and such was his wonderful memory, that (we are told) on the day after his arrival he was able to address all the senators and knights by name. The terms he offered were, that all the Greeks in Italy should be left free, and that the Italian nations, from Samnium downwards, should receive back all they had forfeited to Rome. Hard as were these conditions, such were the necessities of Rome and the persuasiveness of Cineas, that the Senate would probably have yielded, if the scale had not been turned by the dying eloquence of old Appius Claudius. The ambassador returned and told the king that there was no people like the Romans—that their city was a temple, their Senate an assembly of kings.

The felicity of the orator's allusion is not impaired by the indirect and unintended compliment to himself; for we do not believe that Cineas, with all his persuasiveness, argued his cause more eloquently before the Roman Senate than M. Kossuth before the American Congress.

MISSISSIPPI.—The Senate of Mississippi has passed a resolution to go into joint convention to fill the vacancies in the United States Senate, but has laid on the table a proposition to elect for the long term. The joint convention was to meet on Thursday last.

PENNSYLVANIA.

GOV. JOHNSON'S message is a concise document almost exclusively confined to a review of State affairs.

Within the last three years the public debt has been reduced from $40,842,379 to $40,114,236, and, as this has been accomplished without impairing the efficiency of the public works, the Governor refers to it as a proof of the success of the sinking fund system established in 1849.

Attention is called to the necessity of finishing the North Branch (Susquehanna) canal, and to the propriety of calling upon the national government for a portion of the public lands in aid of various great lines of railway communication within the borders of the State. The radical defects of the existing mode of administration which prevails in regard to the internal improvements are dwelt upon as needing especial attention, and changes are suggested with a view to secure proper checks and the enforcement of proper responsibility.

A hope is expressed that the present Legislature will take steps to urge upon Congress the injurious effects of the existing tariff upon the manufacturing, mining, and agricultural interests of the State, and to press the demand for such a modification of the laws as will protect American labor against ruinous competition with foreign products.

The message renews Governor Johnson's recommendation in relation to the establishment of a system of free banking, as the only method by which the circulation of the depreciated currency of other States can be prevented in Pennsylvania. The disregard of the law existing against small notes issued by banks of other States is described as extensive, and injurious in its moral as well as its commercial aspect.

Minor recommendations have reference to the defective condition of the public system of education, arising from insufficiency of funds and the want of proper teachers, and to the desirableness of cherishing all means adapted to diffuse a practical and scientific knowledge of agriculture.

The receipts of the State for the current year are estimated at $4,317,500; the expenditure at $4,253,500.

The Governor makes no allusion to federal politics, except that in connexion with the demand for tariff reform.

LORD PALMERSTON'S RESIGNATION.—The Express speculates on Lord Palmerston's withdrawal from the British Cabinet:

"What drove Lord Palmerston out of the Cabinet, is a great question of the day. Kossuth, some say—everything, with some persons, is Kossuth. The Times talks mysteriously. The Chronicle only guesses. The Post, his Lordship's organ, rather threatens, but is mute. All the London journals, though not exactly silent, are evidently very ignorant of the real cause—only one of them, the Sun, embodies anything like a probable guess. That paper says:

"The statement in the best informed American circles is, that Lord Palmerston goes out upon this affair of the Prometheus."

"Probably true.—Prometheus being substituted for the Mosquito question, in which his Lordship is involved all over, to his very head. The firing into the Prometheus is already, or is to be, apologized for,—and there could be no resistance to the apology, because not even Lord Palmerston can be belligerent enough to justify the use of a British ship of war as a Mosquito Costa Guarda, to collect revenue for the self-constituted authorities of Greytown in Nicaragua. Mr. Webster, however, has not been content with telling Lord Palmerston that this rude, wrongful act must be summarily apologized for,—but that the Clayton and Bulwer treaty must be practically carried out by the surrender of all British authority and dominion over that august potentate of Mosquito.

"Lord Palmerston, from the start, it is well understood, has resisted the surrender of the British Protectorate over the Mosquito Kingdom."

ATROCIOUS MURDER AND ROBBERY.—We learn, that on Sunday night, about 11 o'clock, two persons came to the house of Mr. Herring, in Columbia county, on the Washington road, a mile above Augusta and called him to the front door, and requested to be allowed to stay all night. He asked them in. They told him to come out, as they had a horse and buggy with them. As soon as he got outside the door he was shot down. Mrs. Herring then barred the door and prevented the entrance of the murderers. About an hour afterwards they returned and fired through an augur hole in the door and killed her. She died in a few minutes after being shot. They then entered the house and took therefrom one hundred and seventy dollars.

Mr. Herring survived to give the above particulars of this atrocious affair, and was still living at the last accounts. He was shot twice and has two balls in his body. There is no prospect of his recovery from his wounds. He states that one of the men was a large and powerful mulatto fellow. The other a white man.

A pack of good track dogs have been procured and put in pursuit, and we hope to be enabled to announce the arrest of the murderers.

Mr. and Mrs. Herring were an elderly couple, aged about 70 years each, and were living by themselves, there being no other persons, white or black, living on the premises.—Augusta Constitutionalist, Jan. 15.

CAUSES OF INSANITY.—The more ordinary causes of insanity, such as pecuniary difficulties, disappointment in love, religious excitement, grief, intemperance, and excessive joy, are generally well understood. But, in a report of the Bethlem Hospital, England, we find some causes assigned which, to say the least, are curious and almost incredible. Thus two men became mad from fear of the cholera; two women from living with insane persons, and from a terrific or singing class; one from terror at the Parisian revolution in 1848, and one from the excitement of travelling, for the first time, in a railroad car. In several cases insanity resulted from bodily sickness. Three men became crazed from exposure to a hot sun. One [illegible] went mad from [illegible]. [illegible] are more liable to hereditary insanity than males, and it is known that their sedentary occupations renders them more subject to it, from moral causes than the other sex. In the Bethlem Hospital, during one year, 12 females were admitted who had gone mad from love, but not one male. In conclusion, it is said that half the causes, whether as regards men or women, are moral ones, a fact which should inculcate forcibly on parents, teachers and guardians, the necessity of disciplining the moral sentiments, as well as cultivating the intellect.

STEAMBOAT ACCIDENTS.—On the morning of Tuesday, the 13th instant, at about 2 o'clock, the steamer Clipper, bound from Memphis to this city, took fire at New Carthage, Louisiana, a few miles above Grand Gulf, and burned to the water's edge. She had on board seven hundred bales of cotton, which were entirely consumed. But one life was lost—that of one of the pilots or engineers.

The steamer Romeo, on the 31st ult., on her first trip up the Ouchita, run upon a snag, four miles below Champagnolle, and sunk in a few minutes after she struck. The cabin and furniture is all that was saved of the boat, and a few barrels of freight was saved, but the most of her freight will be an entire loss. No insurance, we understand, as usual, on the cargo lost.

☞ The Cincinnati Times, referring to Gen. Caravajal, the present hero of the Sierra Madre war, says:

"In 1829 we were acquainted with a slim and somewhat effeminate young man of about twenty, of a nervous temperament, and very gentle disposition, at Bethany, Virginia, the home of Bishop Alex. Campbell—who was a kind of student and worked for insight about Mr. Campbell's printing office and bindery. He had come there from Kentucky, where he had been at school. He was strong in Campbell's faith. He was a native of Northern Mexico, and wrote his name Jose Maria de Jesus Caravajal, (pronounced Hose Maria de Hesus Caravajal.) He is the present hero of the Sierra Madre war."

New York Wire Railing Works.

PUBLIC attention is invited to a new improvement in manufacturing Iron Railing, Grating, etc., etc., made from Iron Rods and Wrought Iron, designated WIRE RAILING.

It is the most BEAUTIFUL ENCLOSURE for public or private grounds, farms, cemeteries, balconies, verandas, arbors, etc. etc.

WINDOW GUARDS AND GRATING.

For stores, dwellings, lunatic asylums, prisons, steamships, etc. IRON BEDSTEADS, with wire sackings, tree guards, coal and ore screens, and a variety of articles too numerous to mention which this invention is susceptible of, possessing conveniences never before known, resulting from the improvement for which this article was patented. For elegance, combined with strength, for the beauty of its innumerable variety of designs, and especially for cheapness, for one half less than cast iron, it is altogether unrivaled by any thing as yet offered to the public. The plan of crossing the rods is so contrived that each binds the other, and thus a mutual support is given to each individual part of the whole structure. It is believed that fabrics formed of the largest wire, and manufactured in this manner, will endure at least five times the violence that a Cast Iron Railing in ordinary use is capable of withstanding. Prices vary from 30 cents to $2 per lineal foot. The subscriber also manufactures WIRE FENCE.

For enclosing farms, railroads, parks, lawns, etc. etc., guaranteed to resist cattle, horses, sheep, etc., which are becoming entirely used, and greatly distinguished by lightness of appearance and elegance of form, being imperceptible at a short distance, the view is thus uninterrupted, the prospect unimpaired, and the beauty of landscape unimpaired. The fence is made on an entirely new plan, being portable, yet secure. The whole may be taken down and transported with the same facility as ordinary iron rods. Price from $1 50 to $3 per rod, including Iron Posts, from 12 to 16 feet apart.

Inquiring orders addressed to the Proprietor will meet with prompt attention.
