Vienna, April 18.—The political Gazette of Agram, in a letter from Oblas, on the military frontier, says: "A part of our Bosniak neighbors, intent only on pillage and murder, made an excursion on the number of 30 or 40, to our peaceful country near Bosnia, in order to drive off our cattle; they were however discovered in time by the cordon on the frontier, and driven off. On the 8th they returned, but in ten times greater number, but were so warmly received by the few brave troops belonging to the cordon, that they were obliged to retreat without booty, and with the loss of two of their number killed, and some wounded."

SELECTIONS

From Late Foreign Journals—DRAMATICIENS.

Miss Smithson has arrived in Paris. A new grand opera has been performed in Amsterdam, called Numa, second Roi de Rome, the words and music of which are both by the same author, M. Fodor.

Fanny Ayton has been performing with success at Glasgow. This young lady is said to possess literary attainments, and has translated into Italian, Mackenzie's "Julia de Roubrigue."

Macready and T. P. Cooke have been playing in Dublin, where the Covent Garden pantomime has been got up, with Paulo, Ella, Sutton, &c. from London. Previous to his Dublin performances, T. P. Cooke played at Newcastle.

Ducrow has been giving admirable exhibitions of horsemanship, &c. at Liverpool.

Young played for three nights a short time ago at Newcastle, where Vandenhoff had previously been exerting himself with some success—having played portions of Shakspeare: Hamlet, Shylock, Coriolanus, and Petruccio, all on one night!!

Heinfetter, and Malibrán have just taken their benefits at the Italian Theatre in Paris, and the season has closed. Malibrán played, for the first time, on her night, a portion of Matilde, in "Matilde di Sabaena, and two acts of "Tancredi;" and Heinfetter played Suzanna, in "Le Nozze di Figaro," and, for the first time, Rossina, in "III Bar berra di Seviglia."

to Philadelphia, was spoken yesterday off Barbegat. (Com. Adv.)

Georgia and the Cherokees.—The Cherokee Phoenix of the 29th ult. intimates that the Georgians, or that portion of them, who wish to plunder the Indians, are making prompt preparations to begin the work of extermination. We hope the Phoenix is prematurely alarmed. We believe it cannot be otherwise. It is very probable, however, that some of those bad citizens who fear neither the opinion of men, nor the judgement of judgement of God, may be taking such measures as the Phoenix speaks of: to wit, obtaining and sophisticating notes, making up false accounts, &c. in order to institute civil suits for large amounts. The Phoenix says the attack will thus commence on the principal men of the nation; Messrs. Ross, Ridger, Vann, &c. and that "some time in June, the Sheriff of Carroll County will make his descent on these men." We hope the Sheriff will have to bawl, in vain, for his posse comitatus. We know, not merely from newspaper report, but from direct information, that a case is in progress, which, unless the delay arises on the part of Georgia, may come before the Supreme Court of the Nation within a period brief enough to work no serious injury to the rights of any party.—Mr. Wirt will vindicate before that august tribunal, the claims of 70,000 human beings. If these claims be then found imperfect, or unsustainable, they must go west of the Mississippi, or into the Pacific, or wherever they may be driven. The Phoenix also mentions that the scoundrels who have intruded upon the Cherokee lands for the purpose of digging for gold, continue to prosecute their robberies, and that their numbers accumulate daily. It is said that, at a moderate estimate, ten thousand dollars worth of gold is obtained every day by these thieves. Robbers and thieves they are, whether the land belongs to the Cherokees or to Georgia. They have, individually, no right to the soil or to the gold it contains. The Phoenix adds: "Among the many circumstances which induce us to believe, that the Government has been conniving at this public robbery, are the following, which are worthy of notice. Sometimes the agent of the United States, Col. Montgomery, warned these rascals off, and threatened to prosecute them under the intercourse law. Many took the alarm and left the nation. It is well known the agent did not prosecute them. We have also been informed a source which induces us to make it public, that soon after the return of the agent from Georgia, his son in law, Mr. Hardwick, who lives next door to him, and we believe is under the protection of the agency, was seen with a number of hands, digging for gold, with the intruders. If it should turn out that we have been misinformed, we shall do ourselves the pleasure of making proclamation."

We have been favored with a copy of the following letter from an intelligent friend of the present executive, which shows what the protection amounts to, which is promised to the emigrating Indians. (Com. Adv.)

Licking Molasses.—A rustic of a very singular ambition, wished to be a King, that he might do nothing all day, but "lick molasses and swing on a gate." Licking molasses were to be taken as a proof of royalty, kings and queens may be seen on our wharves as thick as flies on a summer's day—children, from three to ten years of age, each armed with a straw or small stick, which is inserted through the bung hole of the molasses hogsheads, into the tempting sweet, drawn up licked of its contents, again inserted, and so on. A part of each draught, in discharging into the mouth, is lodged on the face; until the filth sprigs of royalty are daubed from ear to ear.

But these little bipeds are not the only creatures whose ambition leads to the licking of molasses. We saw a drayman's horse the other day, which seemed to infect with same desire for sweets. He had made good his position besides a hogshead, the contents of which were overflowing, by reason of the heat, or the agitation of unloading—and there he stood, industriously licking molasses, and smacking his lips, as happy as the sweetest toothed biped on the wharf.—N. Y. Constellation.
