According to the 42d article of the Charter and the terms of the law of April 19th, 1831, the King of the French, on the 31st of May, dissolved the Chamber of Deputies, ordered new elections to be held on the 5th of July, and appointed the 9th of August for the convocation of the Chamber of Peers and Deputies.

The following appears under date of Toulon, The squadron which was generally believed to have sailed for Portugal, or any other destination, has been cruizing out a few miles since the 23d instant, the day of its departure. A fresh wind from the N. W. compelled it yesterday to put back among the islands of Hierræ.

When the ordinance recalling the prefect of Draguignan became known through the town, the multitude immediately througed the streets and moved in one dense mass under the windows of the prefect's hotel, shouting out: The prefect shall not depart! The Carlists have denounced our prefect, war, deadly war against the Car-lists! Mr. Bernard came down hastily—haran

The measure of irritation is full; this step of government is calculated to produce lamentable effects. The triumph now obtained by the Carlists, increases their audacity, and the sterling patriots conscious that they have been wronged by the privation of their staunchest support, are so far exasperated that the most trifling circumstance may destroy their longani-

The Gazette du Midi, May 27th says : Fearful events have taken place at Tarascon: the 18th unanimously voted a project of law authorities who attempted the execution of the law against riotous meetings, and have joined the people, and what people; the people, and what people is the people the people, and what people? the people, who shout long live the republic! and erect liberty poles. The soldiers have repeated the crythey have danced around the infamous tree-taey have irrigated it with deep libations of human blood; they have heaped it round with the ruins have demolished. The same paper gives the following further details on the occurrences at

An attorney, one Mr. G... headed the mutineers. At 9 o'clock, the mayor issued a proclamation ordering the pulling down of the li berty-tree. This proclamation gave warning to the Jacobins and they failed not to take their measures accordingly. At 11 o'clock the authorities repaired to the spot, escorted by a few squadrons of the 2d of horse chasseurs and several companies of the 15th of the line; before the mayor was carried the ax destined to hew down the tree. It was encircled by a band of Jacobins-popular orators, it was said, exhorted the multitude. The summons required by law were performed—they were useless. The authorities then ordered the military to sweep the place; the officer ordered a charge; but the soldiers instead of obeying, dropped their arms and shouted : Vive la liberté! vive la république! and participated in the dances, which indicated their triumph. The magistrates, perceiving that their authority was slighted, returned to the Hotel-de-ville. It is asserted that as they were ascending the steps, the post, consisting of soldiers of the 15th hooted them; the mayor has even received, dit-on, a blow from the stock of a musket. This sorry beginning was but the herald of the misfortunes yet to come.

Pipes of wine had been carried at the foot of the fatal tree, and in a few moments the soldiers were completely intuitioned and left to the diseretion of the riotous ringleaders. A small grog-shop kept by a royalist was pillaged, and the owner, cut down by several sabre-strokes where there was a collection of royalists. The officer summoned the custommers of this pleasuring place; he seemed satisfied with their answer and departed; but the door was broken open, and the armed troop rushed on the weaponless wretches, who made a momentary defence with bottles and stools. Those who attempted an escape were pursued by the Chasseurs; the remainder hacked by the sabres, dripping with blood and stripped of their garments were hurried to the liberty-post and thence to the chateau where they were thrown in indis-criminate heaps. The King's sol citer has made vain efforts to obtain their release; he was not even allowed to communicate with them. The sub-lieutenant of the guard answered him :

Ohio Canal .- An Ohio paper informs us, that the water was let into the feeder near Cir-cleville early in July. The level to be filled reaches from the dam thrown across the Scioto river between Forsman's and Nevill's mills, to the locks in the vicinity, and immediately north of Chilicothe. From the character of the soil, over which this level passes—being a coarse, gravelly, alluvial plan—it is expected, that the canal will not be filled for navigation, much beto fill the canal between Newark and Circleville, in time to meet the completion of the line from without the sight of the sun, or access to the open the latter point, to this place, so that the fall and winter importations of foreign merchandize, may reach the Scioto valley by water, before the canal shall be closed by ice, and that, with the opening of the spring navigation, the exports from this valley may seek a northern instead of a southern market. The residue of the line, to Portsmouth, is in a state of forwardness, and will probably be opened for navigation early in
