NEW-ORLEANS. THURSDAY MORNING, JANUAR 19, 1832.

By the ship Mary Horoland, Esptain Aikin, we have received our files of French papers, supplying Havre dates of the 27th, Paris of the 26th, and London of the 24th They.

The news from France, though not of a general interest, is rather important. A siot has broken out in the fourishing and commercial city of Lyons, which was attended with the most serious results. We have endeavored to condense, from the mass of intelligence on the subject, the following leading

The following is the King's proclamation against the Political Unions: crowds collected round the purlieus of Croix-Rousse. to come down upon the dwellings of the manufacturers, who, dissatisfied with the rate of wages, impused by the council of the Hotel de-Ville, had re- our subjects, in smallry portions of our kingfused to employ several operatives, expressing, in dom, have recently pron ries, for the manufacture of plain articles.

At 12 o'clock, at moon, six thousand of the rioters descended from the Croix-Rousse, rmed with guns, clubs and stones, and shouting in an appalling manner; something like order obtained in their ranks; they stood in serried files, round a large black flag, mulgated, it seems that there is an inte in number, resolved on death, fortified a temporary ed to be enrolled as constables; in number, resolved on death, not need a temporary camp on the heights of Croix-Rousse. This was established as a reserve for the skirmishers. The national guards immediately directed an attack awith the faithful discharge of those duties, are in with the faithful discharge of those duties, are in with the faithful discharge of those duties, are in with the faithful discharge of those duties, are in dered a batallion of the line to storm the position lic order; of the insurgents. The officers gave the word for point of the bayonet against the misguided operatives. The struggle was long and bloody; but at 6 P. M. it was still carried on with dogged animosity. Artillery had been marched against the workmen; but they succeeded in obtaining possession of two of the pieces.

The following is an extract of a letter from Ly-

" Five o'clock, P. M.—The artillery has been firing on the people for more than three hours.-They return the fire with advantage, in as much as they are in possession of the heights. Mr. Schirmir, a partner of the firm Depouilly, was killed among the first, together with several artillerymen.

"Seven o'clock.-Forty of the national guards have been killed, and more than 150 wounded: ruin, desolation and blood have disfigured our fair city. The insurgents exclaim: long live Napoleon, ORLEANS THEATRE. - A new drama, with the title of the BRIDE OF LAMMERMOOR, from Walter Scott's tale of that name, has long been in preparation, and is announced for this evening. We which we have perused; but the press of other matter compells us to put off its publication to another day. As a dramatic work, it does not full below the reputation of Victor Distance; the melancholy events recorded in the pages of Scott's tale, are reproduced with all the advantages of theatrical illusigns, with the same force and spirit, which we meet in the absorbing econes of the Jesuit or the Cambler's fate. The principal personages of the action with singular accuracy.

The uxorious Lord Chancellor, sacrificing the bition; the haughty, vindictive Lady Ashton, exerresident Lucy; the unbroken spirit of the last and Am's a lor has frequent interviews with the last trending in the lap of luxury, and after a long exile, treading in poverty, but in pride, the solitary ruins of his ancestral tower; feeding, within himself, the flame of baronial fouls, and brooding over the vows of vengeance, made over his father's death-hed; the jealous attachment, and studied industry, of the old servant Caleb, to conceal the fallen fortunes of his master; the tragic close of the most interesting characters; these are the materials which Ducange has dexterously woven into a moving drama. The piece, we understand, is got up in that full and elegant style which characterises the mise en scene of dramatic works on the Orleans' street boards.

By the Hibernia, at N. York, Liverpool dates o the 17th, & London of the 16th, have been received by the editors of that city. Their contents are not as late, by eight days, as those received, via Havre. We note no material event in our home department.

that statement I pronounce to be false and malicious, and the author of it a LIAR. On Tuesday, being on my way to the Garrison in company with Mr. Kimball, a citizen, we found Mr Labatut on horseback on the side walk; in attempting to pass him we were thrown into the gutter. After waiting a moment for an apology which was not offered, Mr. Kimball observed that that was no place for his horse; the that that was no place for his horse; the horseman mide some abusive and vulpar reply, and attempted to strike him with his whip, when Mr. Kimball, threw a brick-bat at him. The horseman then charged several times with his horse and threatened to shoot us. Mr. Kimball then struck him with a picket which he siszed from the fence.
