CIRCULAR. TO THE LDITOR OF THE BEE. Philadelphia, January 31, 1832.

Sin, Being now engaged in collecting fresh materials, with a view to an early publication of a new edition to my large MAP of the UNI-TED STATES, I take the liberty of submit ting to you the annexed inquiries, to which I most respectfully and earnesily solicit your carly attention. Under a well founded be lief that much additional information, regarding the geography of the local districts of our country might be acquired by a resort to means which have, on former occasions, been adopted by me with signal advantage; I again avail my self of the same mode of inviting the co-opera tion of intelligent individuals throughout the U nited States, by whose aid, and a firm determination on my part to use my best exertions for the attainment of the object, I trust I shall be erabled to collect and combine many original documents, which now lie comparatively useless in various parts of the country.

With a view of accomplishing this desirable object in its fullest extent, I engage to grant, to persons requiring it, pecuniary or other compen-sation, for the use of Maps whose deline tions are strictly original and of undoubted accuracy. -Any maps of this description that may be forwarded, shall be returned to their owners respect ively free of expense and in good order, together with any reasonable compensation for their us that may be agreed on-

The following are the subjects to which I would respectfully call your attention:-1. Climate, Soil, Productions, and Popula

Fortunately, hough handreds cross this bridge every Saturday morning, going to and returning from Marparticularly in the Western and South-Western ket, no lives were lost. There were on that part of the bridge which fell down, a man and a boy attending a returning coal wagon, belonging to Mr Jacob Beltzhoover, and another boy. They of course discended with the falling mass, but were extricated from the ruins without sustaining the least injury! Four out of the five horses attached to the wagon were saved. The bridge was erected in 1818, at a cost of $140,000 -of course this accident will be a serious matter to the Stockholders. It has not yet been determined, we learn, whether to re
