THE BEE.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED DAILY BY JEROME BAYON. WEDNESDAY MORNING, MAY 9, 1832.

GOVERNOR. J. B. DAWSON.

By yesterday's northern mail we received our regular copy of the 17th ultimo, from which we have had further foreign selections.

We have seldom witnessed a more chaste and elegant piece of acting than Mr. BARTON'S personation of Werner, in Lord Byron's play of that name, which was acted on Monday night at the Camp-street Theatre to "a regally assembled company." Mr. Barton came to our city in the American Theatre, he has proved himself to be in no wise inferior to the best actors which the American stage can boast of. It reflects certainly but little credit upon our taste to let such an actor prove so small an attraction. We trust that Werner will again be repeated, and that a crowded audience will do justice to Mr. Barton's merits by visiting the theatre (when he next appears in it)—they will certainly be highly gratified.

NEW YORK, April 23, LATEST FROM CANTON.

By the ships Panama and McLellan we have received Canton papers to December 19th inclusive; and find that there is our previous accounts.

A fire broke out at Canton, Dec. 9th, which burnt to death a poor woman, her daughter, and two young children. The conflagration does not appear to have been extensive.

We have pleasure, says the Canton Register, in announcing that an arrangement has at length been concluded for the payment of Chun qua's debts.

A month later than the arrival of the company's ship Hyde, and eight months later than the arrival of the ship of the preceding year.

CANTON, Dec. 19.—On the sixth inst., the arrival of the 4th of H. M. S. Challenger, Capt. Fremantle, off Macao, was announced at Canton; having been dispatched by the Bengal government for the purpose of delivering a letter from the governor general of British India to the governor of Canton province. We understand the proposal to depose an officer of rank to receive the letter at the annual court of the emperor, a considerable degree of respect on both sides, and we conclude it will be immediately carried into effect.

Letters from Singapore, by the fourth, state that H. M. S. Satellite had passed that port in progress to China. It is also reported that admiral Owen, after proceeding to the Sand heads of Bengal river to leave despatches, had arrived at Penang with the same ultimate destination. These notes of war have occasioned a considerable degree of interest in the minds of the Chinese, as well as of some foreigners; more especially the Portuguese of Macao. But we firmly believe that for this, there is not the smallest occasion. With business and moderation on one side, and that reasonable regard to prudential considerations which may be expected on the other, we cannot anticipate that a recourse to violence will become necessary. Let it never be forgotten, however, that the success made at Amoy, and that the Chinese are always prepared to resort to the only available remedy, when reason fails in procuring redress.

The Chinese Courier Circular falsely reports that the Challenger has landed three hundred armed marines at Macao; and the English are charged with the design of occupying the Portuguese forts as was done in the year 1808, with their leged lords the Chinese, and that in no means to be credited as a precautionary measure, they have established a strong night patrol in the streets of the town.

The government had sanctioned the attendance of a commissioner to purchase provisions for the frigate. Insurrection at Nanking.—The heavy rain first commenced on the 6th of July, and continued to pour in torrents for three days, so that the city was entirely under water, but it was not till the recurrence on the 25th and 26th of July, that the Yang-tze-King overflowed its banks, and rushing like a body on the city, rose in the streets and public offices to the height of from two and a half to three and four cubits. The village and cottage in the outskirts of the city were of course destroyed, and those of their inhabitants who did not perish with them, those in that overpopulated province to a state of abject misery. A minister has been specially appointed by the emperor to repair thither and attend to the sufferers, with directions to give them no means to be omitted, and to provide them with daily provisions. Several officers have been deputed for inspection or exertion; and the duties of these vessels have been terminated. The other provinces which have suffered are Gan-hway, Keang-se, and Hu-nan; but being mountainous, the waters had soon left them: whereas at Nanking and its neighborhood, from the proximity of large lakes, the waters are drawn off but slowly.

CANTON, Dec. 19.—The young man who was formerly mentioned, who was tried for murdering his father and several others of the family, by putting poison in their food, underwent the 29th ult. the slow and ignominious death, being cut to pieces by 35 knives.

By a report of the board of revenue, it appears by the accumulation of several years, the provinces of China are in debt to government to the amount of 17,740,000 taels of unpaid duties, taxes, &c.

FOREIGN EXTRACTS.

By the Hibernia, arrived at New York on the 23d ultimo.

LONDON, March 27.—The Paris papers of Friday and Saturday, the 23d and 24th, contain accounts from Greenoble to the 22d inst., by which it appears that all disturbances had ceased—that the general government had regained the authority of the local authorities, and gained a complete victory over the turbulent part of the population,—that the obnoxious regiment (the 35th) which had been sent out of the town to appease the rioters, had been peaceably allowed to return and resume its old posts: that the national guard had been dissolved; and that even the factions in the capital had been overawed at the display of so much courage, joined with so much moderation, and that the law would prove, in fact of satisfaction, and will no doubt tend to the consolidation of internal order, should the promise of the minister be fulfilled in the establishment of a rigid inquiry into the conduct of all parties, and the infliction of justice, but not vengeance, on the guilty.

The reception of the reform bill by the peers, last night, was not very different from what many people had expected. A declaration was made by Lord Harrowby, that there were new provisions in the present bill, which he considered improvements upon the last; that, however, much of it was of such "a democratical tendency," and, if enacted into a law, would prove, in his opinion, so dangerous to our institutions, that he did not conceive the possibility of his ever being able to support it. Lord Harrowby added, what must have cost him a painful struggle, and the confession is, therefore, honorable to his lordship's candor, viz. that after all the time allowed to the people of the United Kingdom for a sober consideration of the subject, owing to the rejection of the former bill, he, Lord Harrowby, felt himself bound to acknowledge that the public objection to see the principles of the measure brought into active operation, had in no degree subsided, and that a material change in our representative system was altogether unavoidable. His lordship announced his full intention to vote for a second reading. Lord Wharfedale spoke pretty much in the same sense. He admitted, that in their rejection of the former bill on the second reading, the House of Lords had not been supported by any party in the country—that the former would not attempt to repeat the same experiment, but would vote for the bill going into committee. It was, however, sufficiently obvious, from the tone of both these noble Lords, that the most resolute and uncompromising resistance will be made by them to those provisions of the bill to which the country generally has attached the highest value and importance; and that, if, in any ministerial measure, a creditable hope of a majority for return in the lords' committee should be founded, or what fell from either of the above noble men, respecting their desire to mollify the national irritation upon the second reading, such a delusion could lead to no other than the most disastrous consequences.

Spain, March 24. We were taken to a private source on which we have reason to rely, that notwithstanding the assurance of the Spanish ministry to the contrary, it is intended, in the event of the invasion of Portugal by the forces under the command of Don Pedro, that the Spanish troops on the frontier, an army of 15,000 men, shall enter Portugal for the purpose of aiding Miguel in his endeavors to retake an usurped crown. Shortly after the reply of the Spanish cabinet to the remonstrances of Lord Palmerston, a meeting of the Apostolic Junta was held, at which it was resolved, with the direct concurrence of the king, that as the restoration of the constitutional system in Spain must inevitably follow the success of Don Pedro in Portugal, it was essential for the protection of the throne and the clergy, that assistance should be given to Don Miguel. This having been unanimously agreed to, it was suggested that private orders should be given to the generals commanding the army of observation, to enter Portugal on the summons of the usurper, with an intimation that, although it might become necessary on the part of the ministry to disavow the act, the king would take especial care to reward the officers who should, by their obedience to the orders of the junta, evince their regard for the altar and the throne.

It will be asked, perhaps, how a proceeding intended to be kept secret, should be known to us. We can only reply, that the authority upon which we make it public, is too respectable to admit of doubt.

ITALY.

From the Gazette de France

The disorders which broke out at Naples appear to have been totally unconnected with politics, and we find that they are altogether referable to a quarrel which took place between some Sicilian and Neapolitan soldiers.

Letters from Naples give the following statement: "The days of Sunday and Monday passed in tranquillity and his majesty rode on the Corso. But on Tuesday some soldiers of the garrison having indulged in wine, engaged in a violent dispute with a young man of the name of Antonio, who was passing by. Ten were killed and many were wounded on both sides. Yesterday the regiments of the Guard were ordered to distant places, and the Sicilian regiments now in Naples will likewise be sent away. Perfect tranquillity is now re-established in the capital. His majesty is greatly mortified at these events."

PARIS, March 20.—It is asserted that in a conference between the president of the council and count Appony, it has been agreed that the 100,000 francs which were to be sent to the Austrian ambassador, should be remitted. The Austrian ambassador, it is added, has obtained this concession by stating to M. Casimir Perier that the colors of the emperor of Austria had not been hoisted in any of the places in Romagna occupied by his troops.

ROME, March 7.—"Cardinal Bionetti has demanded the assistance of the Austrian troops against the French. The Austrian ambassador replied that the French troops, which he had, up to that period, been useful to the Pope; but that such services entitled great expenses, and that he did not see how his holiness could pay them in money; that it would be necessary, however, to pay them in one way or another.

The secretary of state was unable to find an answer to such good reasons. He then addressed the Russian ambassador, who made him, it is said, very fine promises.

From the Quotidienne

To his excellency the French Ambassador at Rome.

"Fresh reports from the delegate at Ancona lay the undersigned cardinal secretary of state under the disagreeable necessity of addressing fresh complaints to your excellency. In spite of the proclamation of general Cavour, and his assurances that he does not intend to meddle with the pontifical government, but, on the contrary wishes to protect the authorities, respect the laws, and discharge his duties as an adjutant of the Pope, he has ordered that two persons confined for political crimes should be provisionally liberated. At the instance of French officers, an air allegedly allying to liberty was introduced in an opera, which produced the most lively enthusiasm, among the faithful, and excited sedition cries against the government of his holiness, cries which were heard with impunity in the streets, and in the public places, exciting the people to revolt, are publicly posted on the walls. Persons banished by the pontifical government, and excluded from last year's amnesty, are freely admitted into the society of those very officers who are said to be sent for the purpose of maintaining the pontifical authority.

"Comparing these facts with the assurances given by your excellency in your note of the 28th of February, which promised that the French authorities, possessors of the rights of the French government, would bring fresh support to the temporal authority of the holy father, and to the independence and integrity of a state, it only remains with the undersigned to request your excellency to figure to yourself the sad impressions which the recent report from the delegate of Ancona have produced in the mind of the holy father; and he requests you at the same time to consider how just and positive were the reasons which the undersigned adduced in his former note, viz. that the French troops, far from contributing to the re-establishment of tranquillity, had given occasion to the renewal of past disorders, in spite of all the declarations made against the assertion.

"The undersigned omits observing upon other facts, which, being directly contrary to the honor of the French troops, he doubts not will be required at once. Among others, permission was not given to the pontifical troops, who retired from Ancona by their escort's order, to carry off their own effects which they had in the barracks. They were not allowed to take their carriages, nor to have them sent to the auxiliary troops, nor were they permitted to take the dragon horses. We must therefore protest in the name of the holy father against all these acts, derogatory to the pontifical sovereignty, in order that the rights of his holiness may be guaranteed as well and for the future.

Signed,

"Cardinal BIONETTI."

We make the annexed extract from Galignani's report of the proceedings of the French chamber of deputies on the 9th ultimo: "A resolution in the diplomatic expenditures had been proposed.

"The president of the council opposed this reduction, and complained that these further attempts at reduction, after the diplomatic expenses had been already greatly reduced by the administration itself, discouraged the government from taking the initiative of economies, as it appeared that whatever it might do, the opposition would never be satisfied. He then urged the necessity of amendments being adopted sufficient to enable them to support the dignity of their mission, and quoted a passage from a report of their mission, and quoted a passage from a report of the president of the United States to the congress, in which he complained of the smallness of the sums allowed to the Ambassadors, urging precisely the same reason for their increase as that which he (the president of the council) had just advanced. The honor minister cited the report of the president of the United States, and the minister of the United States himself had assured him that M. Saulnier's calculations were correct.

"M. Jaubert, Mr. Cooper is a romance writer, and he has written a romance on the finances of the United States.—(A laugh.)

"M. J. Lafitte said that in the committee he had advocated a larger reduction, and he did not conceive that any possible objection could be made to that proposal. With respect to the observations of the president of the council relative to America, he remarked that the prosperity of that country was daily increasing, and that in calculating the expenses of the state the receipts should also be taken into consideration.

"M. Thiers argued that the position and duties of an ambassador compelled him to mix a great deal in the world, and use such expensive society, all of which required a liberal allowance; by insisting, however, upon a reduction in the amount paid to ambassadors, would result that the most fit for the situation, would be unable to accept it if they had not a large fortune, and thus the most absurd of aristocracies, that of world by created by the very party who proposed to be most anti-aristocratic. He then, after alluding to the necessity of adjusting the claims of ambassadors to the genius of the courts at which they were to reside, and therefore sending a man of high birth to Madrid, a warrior to St. Petersburg or Berlin, and a profound diplomatist in London, strongly animadverted on the spirit of exclusion manifested by the opposition, which sought to prevent government from availing itself of the talents of those men who were most eligible for the purposes required, merely because they had on some occasions been employed under the Bourbons.

The Quebec Gazette of the 13th ult. says—"America is not exempt from the evils of the times. Nearly all the independent governments, formed of the late Spanish and American colonies, within the last twenty years, are either engaged in war with each other, or in revolutions, rebellion and civil war, followed by proscription, and the tyranny of the successful party, till it is not possible to tyrannize over in turn. Even the United States of North America they begin to threaten rebellion and disunion, nullification of the laws of congress by some of the state overrulers, and resistance to the judicial authority of the general government."
