THE ROOMS of the N. O. COMMERCIAL LIBRARY, are opened every evening from the hours of 8 to 10.

Persons who are disposed to assist the institution by contributing books, are requested to send them to the rooms when open, or leave their names and places of residence with either of the Directors who will call and thankfully receive them.

As the reading department will be well supplied with newspapers reviews &c. it is hoped this branch will be found worthy the attention of merchants in general.

An appeal to young men, clerks, &c. is considered unnecessary.

The entrance is in Custom-House street, the same with that of the Louisiana Advertiser.

The subscribers to the New-Orleans Commercial Library and the public generally are respectfully informed that the Library is now ready for the delivery of books.

The directors are happy to state that the Library already contains about two thousand volumes; consisting of a good collection of standard works in the French and English languages, and a selection of the most popular Novels of the day.

They also purpose continuing to add new supplies in proportion as the State of their funds will permit and make arrangements for the reception of all the new works as they issue from the press.

The Reading Rooms will be regularly supplied with the daily papers of this and most of the Northern Cities, together with a number of Reviews, Journals, &c. Also, a good collection of maps.

The terms of subscription to the Library and Reading Rooms are Five Dollars intimation and Five Dollars a year payable semi-annually.

The Rooms will be open every evening (Sunday's excepted) from half an hour after sunset until 10 o'clock.

The board of Directors earnestly solicit the patronage of the public generally and of their brother Clerks particularly as upon that alone depends the future prosperity of the institution.

It is a notorious fact there is scarcely a village in the United States that cannot boast of its public Library, and shall it be said that the great commercial emporium of the West is so lamentably deficient in an institution which in all countries is generally considered one of the most prominent evidences of the intelligence and public spirit of its citizens, we hope for the honour of our City that such a stigma shall no longer rest upon it; that New Orleans shall soon become as celebrated for her public institutions as she already is for her commerce.

By order of the Board, C. C. WILLIAMS, Sec. pro. tem.
