From the Washington Speciator. Members of Congress .- It is rather remarks Slettist there are now in Congress a President of the United States, two or three heads of departments, and some half a dozen Governors. They appear quite easy in their places, as if they were and conscious at all of having descended. Mr. Adams has even a much happier aspect, than when the cares of the Presidency were resting and him. The arduous dutils of a repreinstructions of his Triend Domenico Deveauum, assistance are mere gastines to him, although af performed faithfully, they are Herculean labours to most of the Messi era. Mr. Clay's countenance is decidedly marked with someonic some secretary and frequently gives way to a thing interes; yeldt frequently gives way to a look of cheerfulness. There is no doubt that
