COMMERICEMENT OF HOSTILITIES.

Contrary to the expactations entertained by the English ministers, and the pages in their confidence, to the last, hostilities had actually commenced before Antwerp—the first gues being fired by the Dutch. On Friday, Nov. 30th the French troops made good their first approaches to the citated of Antwerp—advancing in safety under cover of a log, which presented Gen. Chass from discovering their operation. The Belgian posts on the esplanade looking to made the citated, were relieved by French troops, who were thus pat is soccupation of all the posts on that side of the citate. It is calculated that on Sunday the French will be able to open a fire of sixty heavy guns and about forty morters.

a disadvantage than safeguard; for being placed immediately over the embrasures, the fall of three or four timbers must bring the whole down apon the guns; and they are the more liable to this, as the fire will be upon their flank.

The detail of duty for the trenches of last night was numerous, amounting to the whole of the division Fabre. The operations were favored by a dark night and heavy fog, which did not clear off until mid-day, when the garrison first discovered what was going on.

Nothing decisive is known about the city of Antwerp; but the general impression is that not a gas will be fired upon it. Indeed, independent of the wanton barbarity of the act it self. Chasse would thus dissinish his powers of defence, and ap lase himself between two fires, which would not fail to crush him beneath the rains of the Citadel withing three of four days.

The loss on the part of the besingers must unfortunately be heavy; but the public hould receive with caution the exaggerated and absurd reports that will, no deobt, find their way into the public Dournals.

Up to the present hour no farther details are knewn at any of the public offices. But the firing of heavy guns has been heard at intervals during the day. Chase appears to have been taken by su prise last night, and the French have gained as important point in being able to get into cover without loss. As the night losses, and fresh ground is broken, we must expect to har a heavy firing.

The weather is dry and promises to continue fair; an event of immense importance to working parties, but yet truly it rained heavily, and the ground is almost knee deep in the firing of the surface of the continue fair; and advices down to 7 e'clock, P.
