"I think there is six Richmond's in the field, Five have I slain to-day instead of him.".

Indeed we find ourselves somewhat in the situation of Richard in the field of Bosworth: no souner is one chamion slain than another starts up dressed in the same garb, lighting under the same banner, with sword brandished ready to destroy-in fact we are in great embarrassment and like Richard thirst greatly to encounter and combut the real Richmond, but, however, we hope with different sucess as we'are fighting in a botter cause.
But two days ago, the Louisiand Advertiser, a paper by he bye which has been dwindling- into assignificance ever inco the death of the famented Penrice, was standing in he ranks of the good cause where it had been placed by It is true that we cared but little on which side it cast is influence, for the assistance any party might derive from it in making prosolytes could be of little, very little consejuonce; yet still it ploased us to see that at least its present conductor manifested some good sense in continuing to support the selection that have been made for the office of geernor; and we hoped that with some assistance he would do tolerably well as an adjunct. Now, however, that desertion, base and ignominous descriton, has taken place and that the coat is turned, our feelings have greatly changed; we become the opponent, the strensous, determined and never ceasing opponent of the traiter who has aban-doned his colors, and who has bild himself like another Arnold to the inemy.

He has not been content only with changing sides, and isplaying his own shame, but he attacks us who was but esterday his brother in a most violent manner, cutting and sidehing at us in so furious a mood that many have trembled for our safety: but let the apprehensions of our friends be guieted; we think ourselves fully his equal; and even if we ere not intrinsically so, the justice of our cause is such as o dispense us from the nocessity of such talents as would nocessary to support, with the least plausibility, the op-Yes; whatsoever people may think of the matter, th,

Louisiana Advertiser has come out, not only against Dawwhat could have caused this change? Is it on account of any uporiority which the latter possesses over the former? Can he doubt that Dawson possesses all the good qualities and ibility which he attributes to Pricur! No; we are certain that it is not so; gold we are convinced is the potent infotiv. To certain half way Jackson partizans do we owe this unexpected change. To gratify personal animosities, private rancour, they have perchased the politics of the Louisiana Advertisor, or perhaps more properly speaking those of its conductor; which by the bye we are inclined to hink did not cost them much-a thousand dollars rumor states. Those who poruged the editorial it contained in esterday's paper must have remarked, although it whiningly says that it does not intend to join in any of the personal ties in which the editors of the city have so lately indulged, (hut it has attacked personally two individuals, whom it is rue it does not name, and whom it designates in such a manner as none can recognize them; but against whom it insinuates a great many out things. We would like to know who are those two midbellials whom these gentlemen are so angry at, and what they have to do with a public discussion as to who is to be our next governor? We hate insinuations, and we wish to see plainness and openness in every thing; let the Advertiser tell frankly in what manne these two individuals bear upon the question, and then the public will be better able to judge the correctness of its obsorvations. If however A possists becaller in its mysterious inushdoes we with the with the contempt it merits.

The Advertiser soom really desirous to keep from percondities; we must tell him that we wish to co the same; but auch weapons as he uses against news will use against him. let him be moderate in his expressions and gentlemanly, and

Let it however be understood that we reserve to ourselves the right thoroughly to scrutinize and enquire into the characters and pretensions of candidates willo aspite to public offices, for the purpose of ascertaining whether they possess the necessary virtues and talents to entitle them to the suffrages of the people: we will not yield a tittle of this privilege which we hold as freemen, as citizens of the United States, and natives of Louisiand. The Advertiser asserts that we have made it evident that should Dawson be elected "a majority of the old and tried friends of the President are to be cast aside and denounc-

The Baltimore American of the 24th ult. makes the fol owing reflexions on the complexion of the foreign intellacence received by the late arrivals at New York: they an-

Premature and par-tial risings in Germany and Italy are probable, but my ye with sufficient prospects of union, or sufficient grounds for expecting success in the struggle, or means for carrying it on hopefully. But doubtless all things are tending to a ra-dical change in the social system of these countries, more specially the German States.

The head from the continent is not of particular moment. The affairs of Holland and Belgium have ceased excite much affection. The elections in the latter country have terminated in favor of the Catholic party. The conditions of peace between the Ottomans and the Egyptians have been finally adjusted, and the Pacha's troops have The political intelligence from England is of more con nanding interest-to say nothing of the troubles yet exist ing in Ireland. The question of rechartering the Bank of England, was brought forward in the House of Comme by the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the 31st of May. The project of the ministers for renewing the charter, w of the stockholders was held to take the proposition of the government into consideration. After considerable discus-sion, during which, Mr. Young was the only proprieto who made any serious objection to the plan, the question was put and the motion, that the Directors should be empowered to accept the propositions of the Government, was arried by a large majority, only about a half a dozen hands ness was moving on with healthy action. The American Merchants will be glad to learn that cotton in Liverpool has risen three-eights of a penny, and that upwards of for-ty-seven thousand bags had been sold during the first week of June. We trust, however, that speculation in this country will proceed with caution. I R. member the fa

The proceedings in Parliament, of which we have given extensive sketches below, will be found highly interesting. On the 3d of June, the Duke of Wellington brought forward a motion for an address to the King, calling on his Majesty to enforce a strict neutrality'in relation to Portugal, and charging the ministers, ever since they had been secure in their places, with pursuing a course most injuri-ous to the country. After a long debate the motion was carried.

The reply of the King to the address of the Lords was resented by the Marquis of Wellesley, Lord Steward of its Majesty's Household, on the 6th. It was luconic, to he point, and give little autisfaction to the party of the uke. The discussion in the Lords gave rise to animated and

The discussion in the Lords gave rise to animated and important debates in the Commons, upon the same subject. Immediately after the defeat of Ministers in the Lords upon the Duk's motion was known. Col. Davies gave notice of a motion for Thursday night; (June 6th.) that au address should be presented to His Majesty, expressive of the unqualified acknowledgements of the House, for the contraction of the contr conduct pursued that Majesty's ministers with respect to the affairs of that country. A debate followed of great length, and of the most interesting character Lord Pal-merston declared that while Ministers held their scals, hey would not depart from the course, hitherto pursued,motion was brought forward on the 6th accordingly.
