The predet ship Vinginian, Capt. Harris, arrived yesterday from Liverpool, whence she sailed on the 8th ultime. We have received by her London dates of the 6th and Liverpool of the 7th of last month.

The accounts from Portugal by this arrival, Tully confirm the intelligence we gave a few days since, of a second attack by Bourmont on Lisbon on the 14th September, in which he was again acquised. It does not appear, hewever, to have been a very serious affair. A far more important occurrence, should it prove true, would be the resignation of Gruneral Bourmont and the French officers in Miguet's army, which is stated in various accounts from Lisbon to have actually taken place. The reason assigned is, that Bourmont had for some time seen the hopelessness of continuing the contest, and that having this opinmeas of continuing the coatest, and that having this opinism confirmed by two repulses before Lisbon and the inexpecting disaffection of his troops, he at last took the resclution of withdrawing from the service. All this, however, requires confirmation, and the fact of Bourmont's reairgnation was evidently doubted at the last dates in Lonof the three sovereigns and the diplomatists accompanying continuing the contest, and that having this opin-

Donna Maria arrived in the Taguson the 22d September.

Design Marie arrived in the Tagus on the 22d September, and her reception is represented to have been enthusiastic, and we perceive that from Lishon, Don Pedro had been composed to send out an expedition for the purpose of obtaining a supply of provisions, which was not entirely successful in the attainment of its object.

It is antonneed also, but not officially, that the King of Spain is dead. This event would no doubt have as important bearing on the future furtures of the Peninsula.

The deliberations of the three allied severages in Bohemain had terminated, and the Emperor of Russia was on his soad home. Among other rumors which circulated on the continuent as to the results of this mosting, was one, that the Emperor of Italiy, another was, that the conference had decided that no pair of Lixcombirg should be several from limiting the circulation of the debates in the Chambers of the Chembers of the conference had decided that no pair of Lixcombirg should be several from limiting the circulation of the debates in the Chambers of the Chembers of the conference had decided that no pair of Lixcombirg should be several from limiting the circulation of the debates in the Chambers of the Chembers of the conference had decided that no pair of Lixcombirg should be several from limiting the circulation of the debates in the Chambers of the Chembers of the conference had decided that no pair of Lixcombirg should be several from limiting the circulation of the debates in the Chambers of the conference had decided that no pair of Lixcombirg should be several from limiting the circulation of the debates in the Chambers of the conference had decided that no pair of Lixcombirg should be several from limiting the circulation of the debates in the Chambers of the conference had decided that no pair of the confere

It is adject that the English and French admission of Russian troops to the very guiter of the capital, but that this step on their part had been disregarded by the Sultan. These incidents, however, were not known in an authentic manner to the writers of the letters, who therefore alluded them as being merely reported to have occurred.

London, Oct. 6.—Last night it was asserted with confidence that Marshal Bourmont had returned the command, and was about to make another attack on Don Pedro's lines. In the present state of affairs this is extremely likely, if it fails, the remnaut of the army will be at once withdrawn from Portugal, and added to the Porce which may be favorable to the usurper of Spain. The game of the Bourbons, of whom Bourmont is one of the Partisans of the Bourbons, of whom Bourmont is one of the mast devoted, has long been to collect an army of the discontented in Spain, for the purpose of muking an inroad in the name of Heary V. in the South of France. With Carlos on the throne, this project, as well as the invasion of Portugal for the reinstatement of Don Mignet would receive all due countenance and encouragement; and therefore, however insane such speculations may be conducted in the of policy for others, altogether of the manner of Heary V. in the South of France. One thing, however, is proved by the open display of these ceremonies in Germany, and the audacious language of the Carlist press in France—namely, that the majority of the French people care so little about the late Bourbon dynasty, that the present French King can afford to let them enact their farces, and advance their pretensions, without anxiety or alarm. Nothing clae but a feeling of indifference, arising from perfect confidence, could warrant the existing French Government in permitting a part of its subjects to own openly another sovereign—to andress the subjects to own openly another sovereign—to andress the Duke of Bordeaux as "Henry V." as "your Majesty," as "our King," as the object "of our yows and oaths," togather with the use of other epithets and phrases which mark not only a divided allegiance, but a positive hostility to the existing occupant of the throne.

(From the Messager des Chambres.)

The Congress of Toplitz, of Schwet, and of Munchengratz, has terminated, but the result is waited for with some anxiety. The only resolutions which could have been formed, calculated to excite any alarm, would have been relative to warlike proceedings, and expediency is now opposed to all military inovernents.

LIVERPOOL, Monday morning, Oct. 7th, 1833.—Prose the 24th August, up to Friday, the 27th ult., our 2-otton merket, with little exception, cantinued in a dull and drooping state, and great part of the time several of the sellers of cotton acted under the influence of panic. On Friday, the 27th ult., a public sale of Brazil, &c. was attempted. Thick, from the sheence of biddets, showed the holders the folly of further forcing a dull market. This being soon followed, by a better demand from the Trade, sided by a fiftle speculations the freely in price during the panic regained. The sales made last week were generally 1-2d per lb. higher than those made during the week precoding, and in several instances, we believe, cotton has been sold at 1d advance, or even more, on the lowest of the farced, or we would call them the frightened sales.
