

THE UNION.
—BY STATE PRINTER.
—THE UNION —MUST BE PRESERVED.
TUESDAY MORNING, DEC. 17, 1833.

FOR GOVERNOR
J. B. DAWSON.
FOR MAYOR
JOHN H. HOLLAND.

—Many motion prepared for the day's paper, and several advertisements have been omitted in order to give place to the Message.

We are requested to call the attention of the public to the advice sale of Cotton Presses, Houses and Slave, which is to take place at Hawkin's Exchange at 12 o'clock to-day.

—As many of our subscribers were probably not served with our Ex-Conf. of last evening containing the President's Message, we have transcribed that document to our columns of this morning.

Steam Boat accident. — The Steamer Missouri, Capt. Swan, seven days ago at Louisville, reports while running out from the wharf on Gloucesters' Island 25 miles down the river, the two of the second-highest bulwarks lapsed, by which three crewmen, persons badly secured on whom have since died, viz., the second cook, a deck hand, Johnson, a deck passenger and third of German family of seven persons, two dead passengers were blown overboard, one of whom was drowned, the cabin passenger not injured.

The President's Message. — This important State Paper we had before our readers last evening in an extra. It is as impressive as its venerable author, frank, open, candid and clear. A large space is properly devoted to our foreign relations, which it views to be most favorable and happy.

The gratifying intelligence that the national debt will be reduced to a mere ciphers by the 1st of January next, is considered. The President maintains that the road to intercourse with Spain, in the present year, has amounted to works of $3,000,000 of which more than $250,000 were paid from the customs, and the balance from the sale of public lands. He does not, however, think that the income for succeeding years will be so great, and he therefore advises that there should be no further reduction in the tariff of duties.

The United States' Bank is exhibited in all its deformity.
The President approves some of its recent transactions, which have, through the medium of the public prints, come partially before the attention of an indignant public.

He avows that the Secretary of the Treasury will assign his reasons for the removal of the deposits, with which regard he fully accords. As regards himself, however, he declares that if he was permitted to pursue his own course, he would order a safe deposit against the Bank, with a view to put an end to the chaptered rights which it so palpably enjoys.

The whole argument against the Bank is supported by the most unanswerable facts, and cannot but be convincing.

We are sorry that our limits will not permit us to enter upon the subject in extenso. We are compelled to be brief, but recommend the message itself to perusal, to comprehend the cursory manner with which we have hopped it.

The Philadelphia Intelligencer of the 2nd contains the following notes:

Mr. Duran's Exposition. — We have received from the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Dunn, a communication in reference to the recent attack upon him in the editorial page of the Globe, and will lay it before our readers, to-morrow.

Mr. Dunn will find it a hard task to justify his conduct toward the administration before the American People.— Facts are stubborn things, as Mason, Calhoun, Hernan-drich, and others who have attacked the President, can testify.

MESSAGES
Of the President of the United States to both Houses of Congress.

Fellow citizens, &c.

On your assembling to perform the high trusts which the people of the United States have confided to you, of legislating for their common welfare, it gives me pleasure to congratulate you upon the happy condition of our beloved country.

By the favor of Divine Providence, health is again restored to us; peace reigns within our borders; and millions crowd the frontiers of our country, and claim a share of our political, and commercial, and industrial happiness; towards the protection and welfare of our citizens.

Our condition abroad is less honorable than it is prosperous at home. Seeking nothing that is not right, and determined to submit to nothing that is wrong, but desiring honor and friendship with all nations, the United States stand united throughout the world in the cause of justice and right.

With Great Britain, the interesting question of our Northeastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotiation, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the close of the Convention, and has been continued by the British Government, with the view of establishing a conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line defined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

In bringing to your notice the particular state of our Foreign Relations, I must, however, call your attention to the fact, that they are in a condition which promises the continuance of friendly and allamic relations.

With Great Britain, the interesting question of our Northeastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotiation, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the British Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line de-
fined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With France, the interesting question of our Northeastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotiation, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the French Government, with the view of establishing a conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line de-
fined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With Spain, the interesting question of our Northeastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotiation, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the Spanish Government, with the view of establishing a conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line defined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With Portugal, the interesting question of our Northeastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotiation, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the Portuguese Government, with the view of establishing a conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line defined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotiation, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line defined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line de-
fined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line de-
fined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line de-
fined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line de-
fined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line de-
fined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line de-
fined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line de-
fined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line de-
fined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line de-
fined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line de-
fined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line de-
fined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line de-
fined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line de-
fined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line de-
fined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line de-
fined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line defined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line defined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line defined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line defined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line defined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line defined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line defined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line defined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line defined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line defined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line de-
fined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-
tion, however, upon that subject has been renewed since the
close of the Convention, and has been continued by the United States Government, with the view of establishing a
conformity with the resolution of the Senate, the line de-
fined by the treaty of 1783. Though no definite answer
has been received, it may be duly looked for, and I entreat
you to hope that the outcome may ultimately lead to a satisfactory adjustment of this important matter.

With the United States, the interesting question of our
North-eastern Boundary remains still undecided. A negotia-<