CANDIDATES FOR CONGRESS.

☞ For additional proceedings, see supplement and the 3d page of this paper.

☞ We respectfully request all persons indebted to our establishment, either for advertising or subscription, to come forward and pay off their accounts before the first of April next, at which time we intend to present all those who have not paid.

☞ James H. Caldwell is a candidate for Alderman of the 6th Ward.

The organ of the Porter faction in this city, seems mightily pleased with its own fantasy, that "the Dawson Choctaw-house party," as it is pleased to denominate the democratic party, are determined to oppose Mr. Prieur at all hazards. For the information of that journal, we will state, that the democratic party will do no such thing, and that however such a course would be in consonance with its views, it will be disappointed. No opposition will be made by the friends of Judge Dawson, in the aggregate, to the re-election of Mr. Pricur to the Mayoralty. Mr. Holland having retired from the contest, they have no candidate, nor will they propose any.

The same paper effects likewise to believe that Mr. Holland has backed out from a certainty of delta. This is false. That gentleman has given to his fellow-citizens the reasons that induced him to withdraw, and we should have supposed that from his character and standing in the community, he should have been entitled to full credence.

The Dawson party have not determined not to support another candidate in opposition to Mr. Prieur, because they dread defeat, but from motives which are perfectly satisfactory to themselves. A party which can now count upon two or three hundred majority in the city, can have no fears for the result of any contest in which they should be engaged. Fear, they consider as a fit accompaniment to that system of manœuvring and counter-plotting, which their adversaries seem to be such adepts in.

We call the public attention to the sale to-day at the Exchange Coffee-house, of the valuable property belonging to the succession of the late Judge Lewis. The property on the other side of the lake, known under the name of 'Chinchuba,' or 'Paradise,' is favorably situated for the erection of summer residences, being the most salubrious and pleasant place within the vicinity of the city. It is to be divided in lots to suit purchasers and is sold on extended terms of credit.

The "conscript fathers," according to the Bulletin, were to assemble yesterday in deep conclave, to determine whether the community were to have—"now that the bank was not a creeping thing at the foot of the UNDER"—relief. To-day's paper will probably, with a flourish of trumpets, give the result.

PROFITABLE BUSINESS.—The receipts of the Charleston railroad for one day (the 8th inst.) were but a fraction under one thousand dollars.

We publish to-day an account of the proceedings of the great democratic meeting in Philadelphia. The Pennsylvanian says, "Philadelphia never saw so large and so imposing an assemblage of people, as that which was congregated in the Square of Independence, yesterday afternoon, to celebrate in befitting style, the holiday of democracy. In obedience to the call, FIFTEEN THOUSAND DEMOCRATS appeared on the ground punctually at the hour." The trees, the windows of the surrounding houses, the house-tops, and even the steeple of the state-house were all crowed to excess. Candid men, of all parties, unite in declaring, that they had never witnessed so immense a collection of people in Philadelphia." The vast assemblage was addressed by Col. John Thompson, Mr. Dallas, J. C. Ingersoll, Esq. and the Hon. Richard Rush. The result, says the Pennsylvanian, has litterally astounded the bank party—it followed the blow from Harrisburg so forcibly that they are almost annihilated.

A rather unique correspondence has recently taken place between ex-governor Floyd of Virginia—who was entrusted by the legislature of that state, to make known the resolution instructing her representatives to use their exertions to have the public deposites restored—and five of those representatives, viz: Messrs. PATTON, BEALE, STEVENSON, LOYALL and CRANK. The ex-governor in discharging his duty, saw fit to add some observations and directions, which were deemed improper and to which those gentlemen took exception.—While they all respectfully express their dissent from the views taken by the legislature, they severally rebuke him for mingling his own opinions and wishes in the matter. Mr. Stevenson is highly complimentary to the president, whose course he sustains throughout, and of whom he says, "a more faithful and disinterested votary public liberty never had, and in whose civil magistracy the constitution and union of his country have been justly regarded as the only basis, on which public liberty could safely rest;" and adds a doubt whether the legislature of Virginia have properly represented the people of Virginia on the question. Mr. Patton, (a State Rights man) very pithily remarks, "you have thought proper to add to the request contained in one of these resolutions addressed to the representatives of the people of Virginia in this house, your own hopes as to certain objects to which you expect my 'efforts and exertions' to be directed. Protesting against your official right thus to communicate your official wishes or expectations, I beg leave to assure you, that my efforts and exertions will, on all proper occasions, be used for the purpose of sustaining and rebuking a 'disposition manifested by the president,' or any other executive of this government, or that of Virginia, 'to extend his official authority beyond its just and proper limits.'" Mr. Loyall says, "the gratuitous denunciation of executive usurpation in regard to the public deposites, with which you have thought fit to accompany the resolutions of the general assembly, has no authority to impair the force of opinions however erroneous, still honestly and deliberately formed, and upon which I shall feel myself at liberty to act, unless required to do otherwise by a majority of those whom I have the honor to represent."

The northern papers mentions the loss by fire in the Delaware Bay of the steamer Wm. Penn, with the great southern mail and a large number of passengers. When destroyed she was one mile below Philadelphia, and in full view of the wharves. A letter from an individual connected with the mails, thus details the circumstances attendant upon the deplorable event.

"PHILADELPHIA, March 4th, 1834.

The steam-boat Wm. Penn, took fire about one mile below the navy yard, and was burned to the water's edge. There were about 120 passengers on board. Capt. Jenkins finding it impossible to quench the fire, ran her aground in the mud, and some in water. Several were drowned, but it is impossible at this moment to state the exact number. The mails, trunks and merchandize, were thrown overboard about 30 minutes after the fire took place. Some of the mails were found floating down the river and were brought to the post office.

There were about 30 ladies on board, 2 or 3 of whom were drowned. I was within 100 yards of the spot and saw the whole. The night was horrible beyond description.

The fire commenced at 5 o'clock, and I have just returned from the wharf and it is yet burning—8 o'clock, P. M.

We ask the reader's attention, to the following resolutions introduced by the committee of ways and means in the house of representatives and expanded to their report upon this topic. They no doubt will be sustained by the house, and meet with the decided approval of the democracy of the country:

"1. Resolved, That the Bank of the United States ought not to be re-chartered.

2. Resolved, That the public deposites ought not to be restored to the Bank of the United States.

3. Resolved, That the State Banks ought to be continued as places of deposites of the public money, and that it is expedient for congress to make further provision by law, prescribing the mode of selection, the securities to be taken, and the manner pa which they are to be employed.

4. Resolved, That for the purpose of ascertaining, so far as practicable, the cause of the commercial embarrassment and distress, complained of by numerous citizens of the ... in sundry memorials which have been pre... ...ress at the present session; and of inquiring ... the conduct of the Bank of the United States has ... with it, and also what corruptions and abuses have existed in its management; whether it has used its corporate power, or money to control the press, to interfere in politics, to influence elections; and whether it has had any agency, through its management, or money, in producing ... [illegible]

...ress to the principles of Democracy! Opposed to the United States' Bank!!

At the unusually numerously attended State meeting of the Democratic Association of Upper Delaware Ward, held at the House of Philip Worn, on Monday evening the 3d March inst., John Dallam President, in the Chair, Ezra Chase, First Vice President, presiding, and A. F. Cox, and John J McCahen, Secretaries.

The following preamble and resolutions offered by Mr. J. J. McCahen, were considered, amended and adopted:—

Inasmuch as the present political excitement has been created by the opponents of the democratic party, and as they are determined to carry the political warfare to an extent unknown even in the dark days of the "Alien and Sedition Laws;"

We are imperiously called upon, to assert and maintain the doctrines of the immortal Jefferson, and save our fellow citizens from the proscription which the old Federal party—headed by the Bank of the U. S.—are daily attempting to afflict them with.

Distinctly believing that the existence of the present pecuniary pressure has been the stopping of the Bank and its adherents, arising from the means employed in their various public operations:

First—By the Bank loaning immense sums of money for political and other purposes, during the years of 1831, '32 and '33—and their unexampled curtailment, during the latter part of 1833, and the present year.

Second—From the influence of "Mr Clay's Bill," requiring the merchants and others to pay the duties of the government in cash, thus depriving them of the advantage of the long credits given upon the duty bonds, and the consequent non use of the said bonds.

Third—By the simultaneous outcry of the presses advocating the recharter of the Bank, creating a panic in the minds of the public, destroying the confidence of the whole community, making every man scrutinize his neighbors' business and credit, to an extreme unprecedented in all previous business operations, and compelling the capitalist to withhold his usual investments for fear of their predictions.

Fourth—By the protracted debates in Congress upon the question of the government deposites; thus giving sanction to the slang used by those devoted to the U. S. Bank, who are determined to sustain her right or wrong, constitutionally or unconstitutionally, and hazarding the great interests of our country only for the advancement of doctrines which the people have time after time condemned by their votes at the ballot boxes.

Resolved, That we will firmly stand by each other in this great struggle between the aristocracy of the land the people, that we are for the doctrines which shall be like Heaven's rain, equal and bestowing upon all alike," and we will remember with execrations that names will be obliterated, those who remain faithless to this great principle, during the present alarming attitude of our political parties.

Resolved, That the failure of the United States Bank, as in ... dangerous to the rights of universal suffrage—hostile to the spirit of our constitution, and its existence as calculated to subvert the government.

Resolved, That we view in the late meetings, called for the alleged purpose of alleviating the pecuniary distress of the country, a spirit of partizanship dictated for the future elections, and believe that the memorials emating from meetings of the Shoemakers, various trades, Southwark and districts, and whatsoever names they may please to congregate under, as mere duplicates of the alleged twelve thousand memorial, they having all been embraced within its call.

Resolved, That we deny that the removal of the deposites has been the cause of the distress, or that their restoration will bring means of relief.

Resolved, That we shall look upon those in Congress who may seriously and determinedly produce an immediate disposition of this agitating question, as the true friends of the country, thus putting an end to the means used to coerce them into measures of base hostile to the principles of our constitution.

Resolved, That holding in view the example of our free sires, who "pledged their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor," to secure liberty to themselves, and liberty and happiness to their posterity, we cannot, and we will not submit to be preyed upon by a monied monopoly whose gigantic power has been so injuriously developed in the first stage of its existence, and the obvious tendency of which is to destroy our liberties, but recommend to the constituted authorities who have been elected upon the ground of known hostility to the Bank, so to deliberate, and so to act, as to put a period to its forced unconstitutional existence.

Resolved, That we approve of the course pursued by our worthy Chief Magistrate, as to that alone the mass of the people are indebted for a full knowledge of thosvils which it is in the power of the Bank to produce.

Resolved, That the late message of the Governor of Pennsylvania, relative to the finances of this commonwealth, evinces a clear head and discerning mind, and meets with our most hearty response.

Resolved, That although we regret the loss of our Senator Rives, of Virginia, in the councils of the nation, his conduct has been such as to endear him to every republican.

TEXAS.

As the arrest of Colonel Austin, 'empresario of this country, by order of the Mexican government has produced some excitement among those persons interested in that settlement, we have thought it proper to put our readers in possession of the official facts contained in the Mexican papers received by the last packet.

Colonel Austin left the colony in September last for the capital of Mexico, with the view of urging the government to effect the separation of Texas from the State of Cohahuila, thus rendering the former an independent State of the Mexican Confederation. He was kindly received by the Vice President Farias, as likewise by the Ministers. The Government listened patiently to the representations of Austin, took into consideration the critical position of the American settlers, and promised to do every thing in their power to place the laws of the colony in harmony with the elements of the population; but they gave as their own opinion, that the demanded separation was rather premature. Austin was, however, requested to wait until his demand should be taken into consideration by the Supreme Congress. But the accumulation of business, and above all, the sudden attack made by Bravo upon the Federal troops, absorbed the whole attention both of the Ministers and the Legislature. In the mean while Austin had many interviews with the Vice President, and according to the Mexican papers, he did not always behave with respect or propriety towards his Excellency.

Things were in this state when Austin impatient to carry into execution his favorite plan, and taking advantage of the civil war which was then raging in Mexico, wrote to the city corporation of Bejar, the capital of Texas, the following private representation.

"Gentlemen: In my despatch of the 14th August last, I had the pleasure of informing you that the affairs of Texas would have a favorable result. From that day the Congress have seldom met on account of the Cholera. The sudden civil war has moreover paralized the public affairs, so that up to this day nothing has been done, and I regret to state that nothing will be done. It is difficult to foresee the result of the civil war.

"In such a state of things I strongly recommend that all the corporations of Texas would come, without delay, to an understanding, organising a local government for Texas as a state of the Mexican confederation, grounded on the law of the 7th of May, 1824—Things should be prepared with union and harmony, thus being ready for the time when the Congress will refuse their removal.

"This step is absolutely necessary as a preparatory measure; as we can no longer doubt that if the inhabitants of Texas do not take matters into their own hands, that beautiful country is ruined forever.

"And I am well convinced that the measure which I now recommend is the only course which we can pursue to save ourselves from anarchy and total destruction. Under such circumstances, I trust that you will lose no time in addressing a communication to every corporation of Texas, exhorting them to concur in the organization of a local government, independent from Cohahuila, even should the supreme government of Mexico refuse their consent.

"God and Texas!—Mexico, 2d Oct 1833.

"Signed, ESTEVAN AUSTIN."

Austin's representation was privately and warmly discussed by the corporation of Bejar, whose majority highly disapproved of its contents, and opposed the execution of a plan which might involve the settlers in a dreadful anarchy. Conciliatory measures were taken to dissuade Austin's friends to abstain from such an injudicious attempt, as likewise to maintain peace and tranquility amongst the various settlements. A copy of their resolutions was sent to the Colonel in Mexico, accompanied by a friendly letter, exhorting him to desist from such an impolite plan, in the actual state of the republic.

Austin being thus disappointed in his expectations left the capitol shortly, taking the road to his colony; But on his arrival at Bejar, he was arrested by the agents of the government, and sent back to the city of Mexico.

This event caused at first a great excitement in Texas. However, letters lately received from San Felipe, date 5th February state, that the settlers had adopted a passive course on this affair, that tranquility prevailed, and that the arrivals of new settlers were more numerous than they had been during the preceding year, of people from New England in particular.

Among the obituary notices will be seen one announcing the sudden death in Philadelphia of Mr. William Forrest, one of the managers of the Arch street Theatre in that city, and brother of the distinguished tragedian, Edwin Forrest. The Philadelphia Chronicle says—"This sad and unexpected event took place last night, about 10 o'clock, and was occasioned by a severe attack of bilious cholic, to which he was occasionally subject. During the period of his management, in conjunction with Mr. Duffy, his taste and activity have been observably and successfully exercised; and the fact of his demise will be received with regret by all who enjoyed his acquaintance."—N. VALUABLE PROPERTY.

CHINCHUBA.

THIS property, belonging to the succession of the late Judge Lewis, is situated on the other side of Lake Pontchartrain, at the distance of about eighteen miles from the light-house, and in a direction nearly due north. It is distant from Mandeville 2 miles, from Madisonville 4 miles, and from Covington 8 miles, to all which places there are good roads. Steamboats bound to and from Madisonville pass within a short distance of the house. It was formerly well known under the popular designation of "PARADISE," and is probably (as the word seems to indicate) the most salubrious and pleasant spot within the same distance from New Orleans. For summer residences it offers unrivalled attractions—as its contour on the plan will shew; it projects into the lake, in the form of a semi-circle, by which means it is open to all the winds which prevail on the water in summer. The bathing along the whole front of this property is fine, healthy and safe for all of kinds may be caught in any quantity, and abundance of deer, wild fowl and other game may be killed at the proper seasons. At the distance of about twenty acres from the lake there is a spring of pure cold, wholesome water, flowing at all seasons in a stream sufficient for the use of five or six thousand persons. If not the only spring, it is by far the most copious one within several miles. As this spring Great Men and Cross streets, measuring 25 feet 4 inches in front by 130 feet in depth, French measure. There is on said lot a house with three apartments, and a kitchen in the yard.

Terms: $500 cash, the balance payable in 6, 12 and 18 months credit, for endorsed notes and special mortgage until final payment. The plan may be seen at the Exchange.
