In the furniture necessary to the comfort of the sick, some articles that might be deemed necessary, were not found, but were said to be order id, such as has been procured, were good and substan tial. A separation of the convalencent from the sick-and if possible, removing them to a different part of the house, would be no doubt an advantage to both. It was with pleasure the Committee heard that some change of the kind was in contemplation, believing that it would hasten urn to health of the convalescent, and in diministring the number now necessarily crowded into a room, contribute to the comfort of the sick. All the arrangements about the kitchen seem, at present, excellent, and every thing in relation to it. Mr. Allard, on behalf of the Committee of Con feradministered with a well regulated economy. Of the

Without such an establishment, the scenes of distress, misery and death would be, in periods of sickness, too shocking to be endured by the inhabitants, and too appalling for strangers to approach the city. Although it will be seen that most of those immediately benefitted by this institution are strangers; still as the actual prosperit The several sections having been adopted, and future advancement of the city, is mainly to be as On motion, ordered that said bill do pass and retain cribed to that commerce that induces strangers to come among us, it would seem to be a duty as well as sound policy to make ample provision for them in time of sickness. The Com mittee do not permit themselves to doubt, that if the facts were brought to the view of the Governments of those States, that they would see in them the strongest reasons in favor of contributing a due proportion t wards the expense of supporting their diseased and listressed citizens. The medical department is intrusted to an attending Physician with a salary of $1200, a house Surgeon with a salary of $1500, two assistants and one Apothecary, who have the assistance of nineteen nurses. ombination of the salaries now given to the attending Physician and the house Surgeon, would amount to a compensation, perhaps sufficient, or if found insufficient, it should be increased, to secure and retain the ervices of an able house Surgeon. Such a change, it is believed, would be advantageous. An able house Surgeon, with two good assistants, would render this lepartment adequate to all the wants of the institution, and free it from the danger and evil of conflicting pracice and opinic a that would seem incident to the present velem.

A close examination of the administration of the finances of the institution has left a favorable impres ion on the Committee. During the last year there vas necessarily a heavy disbursement, in finishing the In the current year there will also be an extra-expenditure in furnishing more completely the noise. The expenses of the Hospital amounted last year to about $38,000, which, from the increasing denands on it, will more probably be augmented than timinished. For some years to come, we shall be probably not far out of the way, in assuming, that the nnual expenses will be $40,000. As the increasing me. It is not in probable that inp lence has already increased the number of patients who, even at present, amount to 230; and in Januar were 308, being more than were in the Hospital in an month of the last year. To meet the annual expenses he administrators have the receipts on the sale of the rambling liceuse, which produced last year $47,916 06 and an increase on the investment of made amounting to about 7317 dollars. From the city on allowance of fifty cents per day for each patient above two hundred will add a very handsome amount to the receipts.-These several sources of revenue would doubtless prove more than adequate to the present and probable future wants of the institution; and were they permanent and certain might admit of reduction. Nothing, however, can be more uncertain or less permanent than the sources of revenue. That portion which is drawn obliged to borrow money to meet the current expenses, thus reducing the funds two or three thousand dollars The House took up said amendments.
