Under our yet free and happy form of government, I believe it to embrace all the other necessary and indispensable qualifications. It includes, is he honest? Is he capable? Will he do justice to the high trust you have reposed in him? I answer, He will.

In Mr E D White you have the very autipode to such a character. I knew Mr White when I believed he was honest; when I thought him the man of the people; but my estimation of his character and claims upon public support are cautiely changed. I knew Mr White when I thought his was a character of the property in the way. nurely changed. I knew Mr White when I thought he was that unpretending, unsophisticated citizen he was representated to be. But Mr White, he my opinion, has changed very much for the worse. The possession of office, I fear, has spoiled him. He looks down from his high elevation upon the people as his slaves, and his second election to Congress without opposition, has confirmed him and his friends in the postion that his popularity is unarrailable.

But I frust, for the honor of democratic principles, and looking solely to the interests of our great State, that the people will so decide as to justify the proud expectation that both our horor and interests will be preserved by the elevation to the chief magistracy of the State, of our justify estemmed fellow critzen, John & Dawson

THE WHITE MEETING

According to a notice of several days previous to last Saturday, at which time a meeting was called of the friends of Edward D White, at the Bull's Head Tavern, but which, uwing to the inclemency of the weather, was postpoued to Churaday evening last, when a gathering together of about 75 persons took place, which, to use the language of the several orators, was "very nonrerous," Well, he it so; and even admitting, what is not the fact, that all present were residents and voters of the purish of Jefferson, and that they were all partizans of Edward DWhite; what did it all amount to?—why, reader, to mere fluinmery.

Of the 75 persons present, from 25 to 30 were from the parish of Orleans, and the balance about equally divided between the supporters of White and Dawson—nay, we may venture to say, that had the sentiments of the meeting been taken, the Dawsonies would have outnumbered the White.

venture to say, that had the sentiments of the meeting been taken, the Dawsontes would have outnumbered the White-ties in actual voters of this parish.

The meeting was presided over by Robert Layton, Esq., assisted by two vice presidents. Mr Hayton is a goutleman for whom we entertein the lughest respect, although differing from us in politics. He is, we are aware, possesor of large real estate in this city and parish, and has the welfare and prosperity of our city as much at heart as any individual of our community; but could not the White party have selected a gentleman whose residence was in the city of Lafavetic.

"We have recent news from our emigrates to America.

All of them indicate that the hopes that were entertained have proved fallacious; though none of the entigrants will plainly confess that he has entirely thrown away a happier way of life. Proud and covetious merchants and a coult-tors inhabit the towns on the coast of America and the banks of the rivers; they are of English origin, and flock down with an eye of contempt on the good natured German who seeks only an ideal therty in a foreign country, and finds a m serable existence; who is plundered if he brings money with him, and repulsed if he appears as a stranger seeks. and repulsed if he appears as a stranger septing assistance and friendship. But in the interior of the country none can subsist but the man who has a frame hardenrd against every kind of privation, who can sleep on straw and dry leaves as well as on'n soft feather bed, who is whing to exchange the easits sofa for a hard seat on a block of what; in a word, who has courses to fall bette from a block of what; in a word, who has courses to fall bette from a block of what; in a word, who has conrage to fall back from a life of luxury to the rude state of natu. c.

The preceeding article evidently written with the design of preventing enigration to America, from Germany, had but little effect. Recent letters received here and since the 20th of May, mention the astounds a fact that several thous-and lamilies are preparing to emigrate, and that nearly three and lamines are preparing to emigrate, and that nearly thousand persons were on their way or already arrived at the sea port waiting transportation. About four thousand the sea port waiting transportation. About four thousand emigrants have landed in this port this season, and at least S,000 more are expected. The class of persons now arriving and on their way from Germany, are much superior and more useful than those who arrived last year, as they consist have the form of the class of the superior and more useful than those who arrived last year, as they consist have the form of the superior and the superior hielly of farmers and mechanics-all of whom bring with them considerable gold and solver and lots of clomay wag-gons, carts, &c. There has been an immense emigration this season to Himois via New Orleans. N. Y. Times.
