The following assection, related to us by a gentleman who couldn't form the heave, will remit dour readers of a similar event the sounce of Franklin's memoirs:

The floating last, two western gentlemen went to hear Mr. Blanks princh in behalf of the experience went to hear Mr. Blanks princh in behalf of the experience went to the gentlemen seediborities there was to be a collection made; he accessingly incelluted an inquiry into the state of his finances; he had a plearty of money, but unfortunately it was been as-ready a five dollar note and half a dollar, and even the letter was thought to be too nuch—so he inquired of his food what change he had. The friend had two fi penny bits, and the gentleman borrowed one for the contribution plate. Seartly gifts the clergyman had commerced his disciples, the gentleman found that a 2 penny bit was not the addit, of contribution which was expected, and he wished for aquarter. The extraord was continued, and the merits of the Foles as a native, and the services that some of them had ples as a native, and the servects that seems of them had neisred our generatymen were brought up. The gentleman qualities of penny bit into his pecket.

Thirther teriod excited asw feedings—"the whole of the blustTree had been stripped of all—their homes given to here—the best and the fairest of their nation out off, and bers defined even the privilege of a grave in their native ad." The gentleman pulled out the half dollar, so much least was due to such mea, and he waited calmly and ea-vily the approach of the contribution plate.

The clargy man proceeded—"we are not," said he, "to measure out our charities on this occasion, by ordinary sympathies. 'Our pride is a Washington and a Jefferson, the assertor and defender of our independence but Providence might have revorsed the state of uffairs, and Washington and Jefferson, might have been defeated, their cause ruined, and they compelled to take refuge in a foreign land, perhaps in Poland—then what would Poland have done for them and their followers? Just what you would have had her do to you and them, do you to her sons, driven forth by tyranny from a land where they vamily asserted their independence.

The gentlemes grauped his five dellar note, and whispered to his friend with a tear in his eye, "here is your fip again—gift that into the plate with the other, and take my 80 cents to see with thems I'll make my 85 answer my purpose."
