In our next, we shall give the President's answer. Disgraceful and unprecedented outrage.

New-Yoak, Angust 13.

It will be seen from the annexed Posterip in the Boston Daily Advertiser of yesterday, that a most outrageous act has been committed by a mob at Charleste-wn, Mass, in the burning of the Ursuline Convent there established. A great excitement had been created in the public mind, in consequence of romors that a nun who had escaped from the convent against her will. The precise shape of the rumors was thus stated in a Boston paper of Saturday.

Mysterious.—We understand that a great excitement at present exists in Charlestown, in consequence of the mysterious disappearance of a young lady at the Nunnery in that place. The circumstances as far as we can learn are as follows:—

piace. The circumstances as far as we can test are using lows:—
In young lady was sent to the place in question to complete her education, and became so plutsed with the place and its inmates, that she was induced to seekide herself from the world and take the black veil. After some time spent in the Numery, she became dissatisfied, and made her escape from the institution, but was afterwards persuaded to return being teld that if she would continue but three weeks longer she would be dismissed with honor. At the end of that time, a few days since, her friends called for her, but she was not to be found, and much alarm is excited in consequence. For two or three days prior to the disgraceful consumnation, some anxiety appears to have been felt lest the mobshould proceed to violence; and on Monday last, the following note from Edward Cutter of Charlestown was handed to a Boston paper (the Post) for publication.

Mr. Faltor—Some excitement having been created in this Quarter past 1 o'clock.—Our authorpations were informed.

The Convent is completely wrapped in flames. The occupants probably escaped from the fury of the flames, if they did from that of the mob.

We learn from a Charlestown gentleman now in this city, that the main building of the convent was about 80 feet front by 35 in depth, and four stories high, with wings extending back shout 50 feet from each extremuty. Along the rear of the main building was a piazza, and at one end, the kitchen establishment &c. Altogether it mades a fine appearance.

In the effects of this riot, and of the late riots in this city, do not open the eyes of the American people, we know not what with—At the rate things are going, the time is at hand when all public buildings, and indeed all private ones, will exist only at the pleasure of the meb. The question is no expective corrected as good thing, or whether correcte are a good thing, or whether immediate abolition is a good thing; but whether we live under a government of laws, and whether these laws are adequate to the protection of the laws and property of our citizens. It is, whether persons accused of crime, are to be purished by a mob, or by the constituted authorities of the land; whether men and wenten are to be protected in the exercise of their religion, however arrestous—or are to do it at the perit of all they hold dear in life.

We have no doubt that this dreadfol affair is chargeable in including to be good citizens. Let these respectable in stigators of riot review their conduct, and see if they can acquit themselves of the consequences.

Mr. George Jackson, Sheriff of Opelousas, a gentleman armuch respected for his virtues, as believed for his social and manify qualifications, in a fit of insanity, a few days ago, destroyed his own life. For several days previous to the unfortunate event Mr. Jackson's mind had been considerably detanged, so much so, that his friends thought it necessary to keep a watch over him. As an unguarded moment the he escaped from his room, and after walking some little distance to a pond, precapitated hisself in. He was found a few moments afterwards in this situation, but life was extinct. In the death of this gentleman there is much room for regret. As Sheriff of Opelousas he was a most efficient and p-pular officer. As a member of society, he was universally beloved, and as a friend, father and relation there never was a kinder one.

Adrice to Artists.—A pleasant anecdote is naw going the rounds of the upper circles, relative to the portrait of Ladyr Byron—the same which makes one in a collection of very pleasing engravings just published. It is said shat many subscribers to the vork had expressed a dearc that the portrait of the widow of "Childe Harold," should embedding the series. The publisher, therefore, took steps to inform himself in the first place, whether or not her ladyship would accede to the wishes exterismed by so many of his fashionable contributors; if, in fact Lady B. would consent to sit for her picture. Lady B. considered herself offended by the proposal, and refused to gwe ear to the prayer of all the petitioners. The solheitation was, howeverer, soon after requeed; and B. declared formally, that she would hear nothing more on the subject. The publisher, piqued in his turn, still determined a painter of site to do all in his power to farrash the like-ress. To accomplish this the artist had recourse to a rise and tribe to the subject in red, if possible, to bamish her ladyship "secruple, and direction and a painter of site to do all in his power to farrash the like-ress. To accomplish this the artist had recourse to a rise one that has often been practised, and rarely, if ever, has failed of success. He finished a sketch, which in certain particulars bore a tolerable resemblance of the person in, question—taking singular nams as the labor a tyane 1, to make it excessively plain. A k ind friend got the sketch introduction of the proper, quarter. One may easily conceive the ladying depleasure at seeing herself represented with two little grey eyes, a rose neither Roman nor Grecian, and a mouth worthy in all respects, such a nose, &c.
