IN THE PARISH COURT. out of twenty, patients would consent to submit to; af-ter what was known of the want of power of medicine in the above cases, one could well be supposed to imagine that firther progresses were impossible in that way.

But improvements by time become general; if on one hand you see the rapid strides of nations in the career of civilieation and happiness, when liberty every day removes an obstacle and establishes a useful prin-ciple, on the other, arts following more or less closely the progresses of governments, are also tising to a higher standard, sometimes favored by chance, others by well directed labour; and what was heretofore reputed impossible, turns out to be a fact of the greatest e-molicity.

This is just happened to us in our curative method under the patroner you, successful or unsuccessful; we do not tell you take this and pay, happen what will. Would you lear for your health! It cannot be worse; and you would have at least taken the last chance that is offered to you, a chance which if we may depend on what is reported of our labours, and what we know ourselves by personal experience, will be successful."
