During the violent thunder atorm of last evening, the house of Mrs. Williams, on St. Joachin street, was attuck with lightning. The electric fluid descending from the roof persect through and shattered a back window, and melanchedy to relate caused the immediate death of a young lady named Mary Ann Haggarty, who was at the time in bed in an adjoining room. A chird in the same bed was very much injured at the same time, but hopes are entertained of his recovery. Almost every person in the house was severely shocked. An old genteman in another room received a chock throughout one of his legs, which has deprived it of all sensation.
