I very much regret to have to englosize to you for mplying with your kind and flattering invitation to be present and participate with you at a public festival is ew-Orleans, in honor of the recent triumphs of the friends the administration throughout the Union. Set, gentle nen,'I shail cousole myself in my unfortunate absence with the chiering reflection, that the city of New-Orleans estead of baying languished under the administration of the lemocratic farmer of Tennessee, as was predicted by the Whige, has swelled to nearly double the size it was at the muddy avenues, are now seen, facing one another or well paved streets, long rows of four story, fire-proof edifices, resting on columns of everlasting granite. These clambs are triumph at monuments of a accord great vic kh of January which saved your city from piliage, but a and commerce. These columns speak a language full of olitical wisdom, and will be to after ages an instructive ristury. They tell that it is not by encumbering commerci with narrous tariffe, that commercial cities grow and floursh: that it is not by creating, fortering and then bowing down to a great moneyed monopoly, and making it the arnd immindual enterprize promoted. They tell that is not inducing the scople to feld their arms and look to the neral government to make works of internal improvement or them, that these works are made, and produce find roads o market. They tell that the true value of a democratic covernment is not to direct labor but to protect it-not to sterfere with the rights of individuals, but to prevent inviduals from interfering with the rights of one another They tell that under the democratic administration of Anrew Jackson the energies, capacities and resources of the people were awakened into action—that looking to governpent only for equal laws and protection, and cassing waste time in necless and frivolous pursuits, or waiting to join in a scramble for internal improvements and legis ative bounties, but viewing the masters as the arbiters of their own fortunes, the citizens of New-Orleans put their own shoulders to the wheel, constructed rail roads, established factories, built wharves, paved their streets and erected the me-drfying edifices. But there granite columns are not he only evidences of the real value of that democratical administration, whose late triumphs over a formidable on on ition to its principles and its measures you, gentlemen are about to celebrate by a public festival in your city. Throughout the whole region of the United States are seen profusion the evidences of the happy influence a democrate government, the ev dences of what the public mind can de, when liberated from the vassalage of monied onopolice, aristogratical authorities and those governmen tal chains which would draw it from the best of its own in lingtions. Throughout the whole union, the mind of man' that weak and feeble thing whether swayed either directly by kings and despots, or indirectly by banks, tariffs and sther legislative devices,) is seen rising in its native vigor purposes. It is a pleasing reflection that since the victory you are new as if the depocracy which clevated General Jackson to the presidency, that more works of internal insprovement of a pleasing teffection that since the victory you are new as injurious tendency apon the injurio substantial, permanent and useful character have been completed and are now in progress, than the whole amount of such works prior to that period. The agricultural and manufacturing interests of our country have grown with stealy, firm and rapid growth. But, gentlemen, the most p'en-ing reflection of all is, that for all this prosperity, the cople of the United States have not escrifted any portion of their liberties. The modern whice, neither by their ta. riff. their bank, their nullification nor by their internal improvement system could have made the earth produce more than it new produce-brought the products of the earth sooner to market-sold them for a better price or put in circulation a greater amount of the precious metals. They have therefore lost nothing by defeat, but gained, in common with the democracy, every thing which liberty and industry can give. The democracy are not now rejoicing over them, as over fallen foes, but with them as ransomed

And, although I am sensible that I am indebted for this mark of your atention to the circumstance of my holding an appointment ender our present Chief Magistrate, and not to any personal claims I can have to your regard, I feel your kind. ness deeply and gratefully. I have met with many pleasing incidents, and obtained much ushful and valuable infor mation on my journey from Fort Gibson to this important and rapidly improving memopolis: and the pleasure I have derived from a very brief intercourse with some of the vast population of intelligent, industrious and respectable citizens who have left comparative case and luxury in the old States for the ranged borders of the Mississippi and Arkanese, and are fast converting the forests and swamps of these streams to luxuriant and fruitful fields, would have reached a proud climax could I remain to participate in voor festival of the 23d, as a friend and political associate of the democracy of New Cricans. It is upon this anot that republicans should rejoice at the success of Andrew Juckson-and depend upon it his name was the WATCHWOLD with friends and foce pending the recent struggles for power. The calebration of national events which have reflected onour upon our country, are at all times subjects of grati-cation to a free and enlightened people. The dinner a te Arcade, was catculated to evines a feeling of patroties highly honeurable to the American seeple; it was a triumph of principle over the retten and corrupt instruments of monied aristocracy, it was a sewble collection, and the cause which led to both was the defence of the rights and liberties of our country! This joyous spirit was carried into the Theatre, and the loud calls for Jackson's march and its enthusiantic reception was the strongest principle of the Hero's popularity in the city he so aboly defended!
