DEMOCRATIC MEETING.

The following is the official account of the proceedings of the respectable meeting held last evening for the purposes specified. We need not add more than that the greatest harmony and unanimity prevailed, and also a proper sense of the importance not only of the object in view, but of energetic action and vigilant organization to effect that end.

At a meeting of the democratic party holden at Davis' on Wednesday evening, the 30th day of March, inst.,

On motion, Modeste Lafebvre, Esq was appointed president, H Andry and H Pedescleaux, Esq were appointed vice presidents, and Richard M Carter, Esq was appointed secretary.

The object of the meeting having been explained by B Z Canonge, Esq—namely—for the purpose of appointing delegates to the democratic convention to be holden at Baton Rouge on the first Monday of May next.

The following gentlemen were appointed delegates, pledged to nominate an electoral ticket favorable to the election of Martin Van Buren for the presidency and Richard M Johnson for the vice presidency:

DELEGATES.

Martin Gordon, B Z Canonge, B Marigay, P K Lawrence, S High, T M'Dougall, E A Canon, T Slidell, John Wilcox, R J Kerr, A Rasch, J J Marcier, R M Carter, H Lockett, T S Wharton, J M Kennedy, M White, P J Tricou, J M'Henry, G Brusle, Wm Christy.

On motion resolved, That a majority of the delegates have power to fill any vacancy occurring in their body.

Resolved, That a copy of the proceedings of this meeting be certified by the officers and constitute the credentials of the delegates.

R. M. CARTER, Secretary.

We regret to perceive that THARPES SANFORD, Esq. has failed in the election for Mayor of Mobile. There are few men better qualified for the office; few whose merits entitle them to more esteem; and few more warmly beloved by the large circle of his acquaintance of whatever party or class. But it appears that his election was based on politics; and that the White party united with the Whigs to defeat him. It is almost a pity that the general politics of the administration should ever be permitted to control elections: party in this should better be foregone; and personal merit be the only qualification.

We regret sincerely that we are without later reports from Florida and Texas; as the war in both possesses almost peculiar interest for our citizens, not more on account of the cause than the connection.

The volunteers from Louisiana were those who mainly incited to the triumph of the Texans during the campaign of 36, and the volunteers from this state also were those chiefly instrumental in the subjugation of the Seminoles at the Withlacoochee. If this subjugation shall have been complete, then many of the brave volunteers may be induced to turn their arms for Texas against the Mexican army, and avenge their brethren who were lately massacred at San Antonio and San Patricio.

THE PONTCHARTRAIN BANK.—The stockholders of the Pontchartrain railroad company will meet to-day: as per advertisement.

A young actor Mr Bannister is to have his benefit this evening, when will be represented a tragedy of his own composition. This gentleman is rapidly rising into eminence and esteem as an actor; and assuredly merits encouragement and substantial support.

Tomorrow evening, NORMA one of Bellini's best operas is to be performed at the St Charles Theatre, when Madame Marozzi will be added to the Italian company. This opera will deserve and command a full house.

On Saturday Signor GAMBATTI will give a grand concert at Davis' saloon, of vocal and instrumental music. The best musicians of all our theatres are engaged, and our fellow citizens may enjoy a rich treat.

Correspondance of the Bee.

WASHINGTON, March 17th, 1836.

I believe I stated it as my opinion, some time ago, that the nominations before the Senate would be confirmed, from the accessions to the numerical force of the administration in that body. This anticipation has been realized in part by the confirmation of the nominations of Mr Taney, to be chief justice, and Mr P Barbour to be associated judge of the Supreme Court of the United States, and Mr Amos Kendall to be Post Master General. The nomination of the first and last of these gentlemen was for a long time doubtful and might possibly have continued so for some time longer had it not been for the indisposition of three of the opposition senators who were necessarily absent during the executive session, when these nominations were confirmed. Of Mr Taney who becomes so notorious for his alledged subserviency to the Executive, while secretary of the Treasury, it is unnecessary to say any thing. His character is sufficiently known to the American people and from his long practice at the bar, and his extensive legal attainments, I should think he would make an able judge. Mr Barbour is a native of Virginia, was once a member of Congress, and recently a judge of his native state in which his talents are held in high estimation—I know him while a member of Congress and speaker of the house of Representatives, and had an opportunity of forming a pretty correct opinion of his powers. He and his brother, formerly secretary of War and minister to England, were totally dissimilar in the character of their minds and feelings. Judge Barbour is logical, laborious and indefatigable. He has a peculiar penchant for those legal and constitutional questions which are involved and obscure, and possesses that clearness and vigor of mind necessary to unfold what is complicated and illuminate what is dark. He casts on such subjects a light so luminous as to strip it of its mistiness and obscurity. He splits hairs, subtilizes, and refines with a singular degree of acuteness. He has less imagination than his brother, but more judgment and discrimination, less polish and elegance, but more vigor and acuteness. I am not prepared to say that such a mind is well calculated for a sound judge. The sophistry acquired by long practice at the bar, is apt to impair its power of discrimination, and to weaken its energies. Judge B. has always been attached to legal pursuits, and his mind seems to take delight in revolving amid the most abstract and arid questions of jurisprudence. He will now be in his element, and what would be a labor to others will be a source of amusement to him as harmonizing with his favourite pursuits and enabling him to indulge in that exercise of mind in which he delights. The injunction of secrecy has been removed and it would appear that the nomination of these gentlemen was made on the 28th of December last, and the vote on the confirmation on the 16th inst. The nomination of Mr Taney was confirmed by a vote of 29 to 15—that of Judge Barbour by a vote of 29 to 14 and that of Amos Kendall by a vote of 25 to 7. The nominations also of A. Stevenson, and J. R. Eaton have been confirmed, and R. K. Call appointed governor of Florida in the place of Eaton, who goes out as minister to Spain. A Mr Arthur Middleton has been appointed secretary of Legation to Spain. This gentleman is the son of the Middleton formerly minister, for many years to Russia. He is a man of small calaber, and of excessive vanity. He wears the most[illegible] curled as well as his hair which is of that form's notice[illegible] when he was here put into his head that he resembled[illegible] of our Illustrious Nation." It was[illegible] in 37[illegible] and[illegible] street with him from the[illegible] young lady in his company while looking at the picture of Christ, and he has ever

...glory, till [illegible] his appearance [illegible] ...ago that he [illegible] ...Harris. Mr Tazewell has been chosen [illegible] ...New Hampshire and his place in the Senate will [illegible] ...hope be supplied by one who will depend more upon [illegible] ...his tongue than his pen, and who will be better able to [illegible] ...defend himself and his party when assailed. He has [illegible] ...talent, but is the most bungling extemporaneous speaker [illegible] ...I have heard, and to listen to his written speeches was always excessively onerous.

The slave question does not seem yet to be settled in the Senate. Mr. Webster, though he voted for the rejection of the prayer of a former petition on this subject, has introduced four memorials from Massachusetts, praying for the abolition of slavery in this unfortunate District, and moved their reference to the District Committee. He contended that congress had a constitutional right to legislate on the subject and therefore the petitions ought not only to be received, but to be acted upon. He admitted that it was the unanimous opinion of the North that Congress had no authority over slavery in the States; but that the opinion was equally unanimous that it had such authority over slavery in the District. Mr Mangum moved that the petitions be not received that he might have an opportunity of recording his name against their reception, a privilege he had lost by unavoidable absence on a former occasion. Mr Rives to have further time for reflection, move to lay the motion on the table. Mr. King of Alabama remarked that Mr. Webster, by the course he had taken, placed himself at the head of those who inundated Congress with their petitions.—He hoped that nothing more would be done to increase the excitement already consulting, and that the subject would be put to sleep for ever. The motion to lay on the table was carried: The Navy appropriation bill in order for session in the House, and the special question, a motion of Mr Bell to strike out the whole appropriation for the Navy Yard at Portsmouth, viz: $67,000. Col. Benton has introduced, preceeded by a long preamble, a new resolution requiring the secretary of the Senate to expunge from the journal of that body the resolution of 1833 '4 by drawing black lines around it, and writing across the face of it the word's "expunged by order of the Senate" &c. An interesting debate occurred to day in the Senate on the question of printing extra copies of a report of the Secretary of the Treasury containing a statement of the condition of the Deposit Bank, in which Clay, Calhoun, Webster, Benton &c. participated. The new govenor of New Hampshire arose to read a speech, and pro to the audience disappeared, and left the galleries vacant in a few minutes. Mr Bell has occupied most of today in a continuation of his speech on the Navy appropriation bill. He was certainly very able and eloquent.—He will be answered by Cambreleng and others.

EXPUNGING RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. BENTON offered the following preamble and resolution:

Whereas, on the 26th of December, 1833, the following resolve was moved in the Senate:

"Resolved, By dismissing the late Secretary of the Treasury, because he would not, contrary to his own sense of duty, remove the money of the United States on deposite with the bank of the United States and its branches, in conformity with the President's opinion, and by appointing his successor to effect such removal, which has been done, the President has assumed an exercise of power over the Treasury of the United States not granted to him by the Constitution and laws, and dangerous to the liberties of the People;"

Which proposed resolve was altered and changed by the mover thereof on the 28th March, 1834, so as to read as follows:

"Resolved, That in taking upon himself the responsibility of removing the deposits of the public money from the Bank of the United States, the President of the United States has assumed an exercise of power over the Treasury of the United States, not granted to him by the Constitution and laws, and dangerous to the liberties of the People;"

Which resolve so changed and modified by the mover thereof, on the same day and year last mentioned, was further altered so as to read in these words:

"Resolved, That the President, in the late executive proceedings in relation to the revenue, has assumed upon himself authority and power not conferred by the Constitution and laws, but in the derogation of both;"

In which last-mentioned form the said resolve, on the same day and year last mentioned, was adopted by the Senate, and became the act and judgment of that body, and, as such, now remains upon the journal thereof:

And whereas the said resolve was irregularly, illegally, and unconstitutionally adopted by the Senate, in violation of the rights of defence which belong to every citizen, and in subversion of the fundamental principles of law and justice; because President Jackson was thereby adjudged and pronounced to be guilty of an impeachable offence, and a stigma placed upon him as a violator of his oath of office, and of the laws and the Constitution which he was sworn to preserve, protect, and defend, without going through the forms of an impeachment, and without allowing to him the benefits of a trial, or the means of defence:

And whereas the said resolve, in all its various shapes and forms, was founded and erroneous in point of fact, and therefore unjust and unrighteous, as well as irregular and unconstitutional, because the said President Jackson, neither in the act of dismissing Mr Duane, nor in the appointment of Mr. Taney, as specified in the first form of the resolve, nor in taking upon himself the responsibility of removing the public deposites, as specified in the second form of the same resolve, nor in any act which was then or can now be specified under the vague and ambiguous terms of its general denunciation contained in the third and last form of the resolve, did do or commit any act in violation or in derogation of the laws and Constitution, or dangerous to the liberties of the People:

And whereas the said resolve, as adopted, was uncertain and ambiguous, containing nothing but a loose and floating charge for derogating from the laws and Constitution, and assuming ungranted power and authority in the late executive proceedings in relation to the public revenue, without specifying what part of the executive proceedings or what part of the public revenue was intended to be referred to, or what part of the laws and Constitution were supposed to have been infringed, or in what part of the Union, or at what period of his Administration, these late proceedings were supposed to have taken place, thereby putting each Senator at liberty to vote in favor of the resolve upon a separate and secret reason of his own, and leaving the ground of the Senate's judgment to be guessed at by the public, and to be differently and diversely interpreted by individual Senators, according to the private and particular understanding of each, contrary to all the ends of justice, and to all the form of legal or judicial proceedings—to the great prejudice of the accused, who could not know against what to defend himself, and to the loss of Senatorial responsibility, by shielding Senators from public accountability for making up a judgment upon grounds which the public cannot know, and which, if known, might prove to be insufficient in law or unfounded in fact:

And whereas the specifications contained in the first and second form of the resolve having been objected to in debate, and shown to be insufficient to sustain the charges they were adduced to support, and it being well believed that no majority could be obtained to vote for the said specifications, and the same having been actually withdrawn by the mover, in the face of the whole Senate, in consequence of such objection and belief, and before any vote was taken thereupon, the said specifications could not afterwards be admitted by any rule of parliamentary practice, or by any principle of legal implication, secret intendment, or mental reservation, to remain and continue a part of the written and public resolve from which they were so withdrawn; and if they could be so admitted, they would not be sufficient to sustain the charges the resolve mentioned:

And whereas the Senate, being the constitutional tribunal for the trial of the President, when charged by the House of Representatives with offences against the laws and Constitution, the adoption of the said resolve, before any impeachment preferred by the House, was a breach of the privileges of the House, a violation of the Constitution, a subversion of justice, a prejudication of a question which might legally come before the Senate, and a disqualification of that body to perform its constitutional duty with fairness and impartiality, if the President should thereafter be regularly impeached by the House of Representative for the same offence:

And whereas, the temperate, respectful, and argumentative defence and protest of the President against the aforesaid proceedings by the Senate was rejected and repulsed by that body, and was voted to be a breach of its privileges, and was not permitted to be entered on its journal, or printed among its documents, while all memorials, petitions, resolves, and remonstrances against the President, however violent or unfounded, and calculated to inflame the people against him, were duly and honorably received, noon-tastically commented upon in speeches read at the table, ordered to be printed, with the long list of names attached, referred to the Finance Committee for consideration, filed away among the public archives, and now constitute a part of the public documents of the Senate, to be handed downed to the latest posterity:

And whereas, the said resolve was introduced, debated and adopted at a time and under circumstances which had the effect of co-operating with the Bank of the United States, in the particular attempt which that institution was then making to produce panic and pressure in the country, to destroy the confidence of the People in President Jackson, to paralyze his Administration, to govern the elections, to bankrupt State banks, ruin their currency, and the whole Union with terror and distress, and thereby to extort from the sufferings and the alarms of the People the restoration of the deposites, and the renewal of its charter:

And whereas, the said resolve is of evil example and dangerous precedent, and should never have been received, debated, or adopted by the Senate, or admitted to entry upon its journal—therefore

Resolved, That the said resolve be expunged from the journal; and, for that purpose, that the Secretary of the Senate, at this time in the Senate shall appear, shall bring the manuscript journal of the session of 1832-'4 into the Senate, and, in the presence of the Senate, draw black lines round the said resolves, and write across the face thereof, in strong letters, the following words: "Expunged, by order of the Senate, this —day of —, in the year of our Lord 1836."

Henry J. Fox, Esq., was presented to the President by the Secretary of State on the 26th inst, as the Hanseatic Minister Plenipotentiary to the United States.—(Globe fitted up with rich Canton Satin Damask, Chinese carvings, lanterns and curiosities, brought expressly from Canton to give additional interest to the exhibition.

Afong Moy is a native of Canton city, about 16 years of age, mild and engaging in her manners, addresses the visitors in English and Chinese, and occasionally walks before the company, so as to afford an opportunity of observing her astonishing little feet, for which the Chinese ladies are so remarkable; The size of Afong's feet are four inches and an eighth in length, she is the size of an infant at one year old; she will be richly dressed in her native costume, and in order to give an idea of her language and the cadence of the country, she will sing a CHINESE SONG!

She is at present under the care of the lady of the conductor of the Exhibition, and is making great progress in acquiring the English language.

Various Chinese curiosities will be shown to the company, and their uses explained, and every pains taken to satisfy the curious as to the manners, and customs of these singular people.

Afong Moy has brought to this country under a two yr guarantee of returning her in two years. The time has already elapsed, and she now on her way to New York, to embark in the MARY BALLARD, just arrived from Canton, as she returns by the river to Pittsburg, touching at nearly all the large cities on the route, the exhibition can remain but a very short time at each place.

Afong Moy tenders her grateful thanks for the kind reception she has hitherto met with, and trusts the ladies and gentlemen of New Orleans will honor her with their company, after travelling nearly Thirty Thousand miles to solicit the favor. m28-4t
