repariess: that given lately to Gorostiza, the Mexican minister at Washington, is pretty good. The ambassador learning that the president is anxious to recognise the independence of Texas, called at the White House and endeavored to dissuade General Jackson by various interrogatories—'don't you know (said Gorostiza) that it would be very impolitic to interfere in a purely family quarrel? Don't you know that the treaty will the heirs of Moreau would prevent them from asking a higher reward.

Apropose—iron steamboats would be infinitely the best species of eraft to ply on the Mississippi and iss tributary streams. The Improvement and banking mompany should establish such beats on their packet lines to Bayors Sarah and Natchitoches.

The navigation of the Mississippi river at its debourhurs may at length be improved. The chamber of romnerce have fortunately and spiritedly taken up the abject, and in addition to their report, which was lately published in this gazette, they have addressed a comporation of $300,000, which they consider ade uate to improve the navigation—by closing up all the asses except one; and by confining so as to deepen it chumel in the preserved mouth. This oan easily be flected by wattles and fascines at a comparatively riffing cost; and with permanence and success. It is sincerely to be regretted that the members of the hamber of Commerce still leave neglected the establishment of packet lines to Liverpool. This is of early similar importance to the previous project; for ree lines of packets once established hence to Liverpool and also be Havre, they would be of the meet man, that desired the called for the previous question lost. Don't you know that the treaty will prevent the American government from taking an active part in this affair; and that the laws of nations will be velated if you recognise the independence of the colony? You should let the contest proceed without any intervention: believe me, the Texians are rebels, and deserve no protection from this country—they have committed acts which deserve punishment: let therefore justice be done. This was said in a pompous man, ner, in a tone half persuasive half angry, by a little infirm man.

General Jackson listened coolly to the minister, and then added in a similar tene—'I appears, sur, that your master is very fond of American blood id oven not think that this will cause him indigestion!' The president immediately walked into another apartment.

Six: Very constant occupation in the Senate for the last two weeks has prevented me giving an earlier answer to your letter of the 15th ul. As I have not net extended to the Bec for four or five weeks, I have not net with the article you allude to in which Ripley's conduct is noticed. You did not however do him justice it you attributed his inaction to indolence or inattention. He has been confined to his room the greater part of this winter by indisposition, or was so feedle when he came to the house as to be unable to pay attention to business. That he would have been able however to accomplish ail, or many of those things, which you seem to think are so easy to be done here, if he had been in perfect health, I greatly doubt.

And I cannot help remarking, that without wisning to impugn your sincerity and public spirit, it does appear to use that your remarks on the delevation of 1.

The schooner Sabina, of New Orleans, from Sizal, arrived at Havana, had been boarded on the night of the 6th March, by a Texan schooner of two efficers and sixteen men, who forcibly took their boat, keeing suchor and chain; after leaving the Sabina they divided the crew into two parties and attacked the Mexican sebooner Pelican, owned by the American consul at Tampico, which had just arrived from New Orleans with a cargo of flour and provisions. When taken by the Texans, the captain, mate and five of the crew were on shore, and five of the crew, two custom-house officers and five soldiers were on board of the Pelican, which vessel was last from New Orleans, and was then under seizure, as it was said she had powder on board—All on board the Pelican were reported to have been killed.
