NEW ORLEANS MARKETS.

New Orleans, Dec 11, 1835.

The cotton market to day was very dull and nothing done.—Flour still continues high—and in consequence of this there is no material change for sugar, &c.—but it is the Mississippi is fast rising and large arrivals of produce are arriving every day, we accordingly expect a considerable change in the prices of the market.

Cincinnati, Nov 26.

The business of the summer and fall thus far, has been active, and the amount of sales of all descriptions of produce and merchandize had been much larger than in any period during the last five years. Purchases at present have been extensive, and the facilities of transportation, owing to the continued stage of water, have contributed to keep up supplies of most of the leading articles of trade. Our wholesale merchants have had an active business season in receiving and forwarding merchandize—commission merchants have had their stores crowded with goods for the interior; and the rail and canal boats have had a fruitful season for freighting, and at living prices. The fall has advanced rapidly, which usually causes a decline in business. This year however affords no evidence of a sudden interruption of trade. The southern exports have not yet made gable for steamboats for many days to come, until after a few days; while those of the tributaries of the Ohio and Mississippi to the north have been in navigable order for keel and steamboats. The late rains have opened the water communication by steam to Wheeling and Pittsburgh; and there is no reasonable doubt that the Kanawha, the Kentucky river and the Wabash will each become navigable for steamboats. This will cause a revival of business for the balance of the season, and until ice suspends temporarily our intercourse.

Official Paper and City Paper,

PRINTED BY J. BAYON,

NEW ORLEANS:

SATURDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 12, 1835.

The city council held their weekly session last evening, but transacted publicly no business of importance. The members deliberated half an hour in close session upon confidential letter from the mayor, and spent the remainder of the evening in discussing a lengthy [illegible] relating to the [illegible] of the corporation. He vetoed the resolution granting a salary to the teacher of a drawing school [illegible] with cars to land between St Louis and Toulouse streets; a third for the construction of wharfs and the extension of a levee opposite the fifth ward; a fourth allowing John Pulley to erect a smoke house; a fifth ordering Bonfinjne street to be opened; in all of which the council persisted.

The resolution increasing the salary of the boat wharfinger and the public commissaries of the 5th and 7th wards has been vetoed, was modified.

Meyerbeer's grand opera of Robert le Diable was admirably performed at the French theatre last evening to a densely crowded and respectable audience. The performers seem to improve and delight in repetition. The scenery is splendid; the dresses and decorations equally grand; the orchestra full and disciplined; and the machinery well regulated.

Last season we eulogized on the merits of the opera and performers; and now only direct attention to it when again represented, as there are many of our citizens who have yet witnessed it. We can sincerely invite the [illegible] and its next repetition, in order to be gratified.

Le Tour de Nesle will be performed at that theatre tomorrow evening.

TEXAS.—A gentleman who left San Felipe on the 25th ult, and arrived here yesterday, reports that the army of Cos had not then surrendered, the garrison of San Antonio were reduced to the necessity of eating their mules; that the inhabitants were daily abandoning the town to avoid starvation; and that 300 of the Mexican troops had deserted to and joined the army of Texas.—Doubtful.

Our Trade with Mexico.

An eminent and experienced merchant of the city has called our attention to the present and unprecedented state of our trade with Mexico, in consequence of the difficulties pending between Texas and that country—or rather in consequence of the active and open assistance given by our citizens to Texas, and the mode of conduct resorted to by the Texians.

The amount of the export trade hence to the ports of Mexico during the past 20 months was upwards of 8,500,000 dollars—3,500,000 of which was of the domestic manufactures of this country. During the same period, the imports received hence from Mexico amounted in value to 2,000,000 dollars—so that the trade carried on between New Orleans and the ports of Mexico, may be estimated in round numbers at 17,500,000 dollars in a few months—and these chiefly confined to the present year.

The nature of this trade is as much to be considered as its amount, in order to ascertain its true value. It appears that 3,500,000 dollars of it is of the home manufactures of the United States, of which the benefits must necessarily be felt over a large space of our manufacturing districts; and in the domination of which an equal portion of our citizens must reciprocally be involved or interested. And the import trade is of like importance and interest, as it chiefly consists in bullion or specie, which from the nature of the currency of the country is indispensable for the credit of the nation, of all our banks and of individuals. Now this import business is likely to be prostrate, if not destroyed by the conduct of our Texian allies. About 5 or 6 months since there were upwards of six millions of specie in the value of our local banks; at the present period—owing to the system of embargo and cruising established by the Texians, and therefore also resorted to in self defense by the Mexican government—the amount of specie in the banks is probably less than 3 millions, which is becoming gradually lessened without any hopes of [illegible] augmented, as some of our citizens have resorted with the Texians to cut off our wonted resources. Nay what is more and makes confusion worse confounded, is that even the members of our chamber of commerce have been instrumental in these suicidal dispositions—without calculating on the costs, or reflecting on the results; altho they must be perfectly aware of the demand made by the banks of the Atlantic cities on New Orleans for specie, to maintain their solvency. It is true that specie to the amount of three quarters of a million were lately imported from Mexico into New York; but this is very inadequate to the demand of the Atlantic banks, and but aggravates the evils pressing on the trade hither.

But not only is the import trade with Mexico likely to be destroyed, but the whole of the export hence; for now perhaps the value of goods remaining in the hands of our merchants received from Europe and the Atlantic cities for the Mexican market amounts to 2 or 6 millions which are now a dead weight or will prove a palpable loss to them during the existence of the embargo & cruising system established by the Texians under the patronage of our merchants. But against whom is that system operative? Against the Mexicans? No: but against our own commercial transactions on a new extended scale. The same that trade to Mexico are chiefly American, insured if not freighted by our merchants so that all our insurance companies as well as traders are involved in this ruinous system of espionage and embargo. And when the trade is carried on in Mexican vessels which are generally insured by our citizens. The Texians prescribe one kind—the Mexican government must necessarily prescribe all; and any boundless pirate become prostrated in the opposition of the belligerents. The government of Mexico are already sufficiently inimical to our citizens and trade; and now their hatred approximates the verge when it shall know no bounds; and own the obligations of no treaty with this country: this is virtually if not actually the case at present; as all our citizens in Mexico are viewed with suspicion if not hatred, and are considered as legitimate objects of oppression and plunder.

And further: if this system is continued, our import and export trade with Mexico must be annihilated. It is known that importing merchants here have but a credit from the government of 2 and 6 months on the duties on goods, while in Havana the importing merchants have government warehouses to store their goods; are allowed a credit of 3 years; and are then but charged 3 per cent on exportation. Now it is also known that Spain has by this time recognized the independence as a nation of her Mexican colonies; and it may reasonably be inferred that a treaty of friendship and alliance and of reciprocity in trade will be immediately negotiated between Mexico and Spain, giving to the latter peculiar advantages over other nations—and perhaps particularly over the United States, in consequence of the open and unblushing assistance lended by our citizens, particularly of New Orleans, to the people of Texas. Now should this probable result actually occur, how could the merchants of New Orleans compete with those of Havana for the Mexican trade, when the former have no warehouses and short credits, and the latter have every commercial comfort and advantage; and may also have a preference from a correspondence of language and laws, from treaties and [illegible], from determination and duplicity?

The truth is that our merchants by sanctioning the measures adopted by Texas against the Mexican people, have committed inexcusable hostility against themselves and their countries, which they are now on the verge of ruining; and not only of injuring themselves, but of more or less materially affecting the manufactures and coastwise trade of most of the Atlantic cities, so long as the disturbances and cruising system continue—any more than for the conduct of our citizens towards Mexico has given resemblance of justice to any abandoned act of wrong and outrage, and may leave an indelible impression subversive of our interests and probably even of friendly intercourse with Mexico. To trade with any other nation will be preferred to carrying on commerce with those viewed as perfidious friends and marked enemies.

Altho we have thus embodied the sentiments of some of our merchants—it is other that they may have their due weight in public estimation, yet we do not ourselves participate in any apprehensions of the result of the Texian contest as regards the Mexican trade with New Orleans: for we believe that federalism will triumph in Mexico, and that the trade with her will be restored to its legitimate basis. And we are aware that the chief if not the sole desire of the Texians in authorising and equipping captors is rather to act in self defence, and against the Mexican armed vessels which now infest their coasts—one of which is now preparing in this port and ship, the Texians are not to be held responsible for the embargo of general Mehia, altho the unfortunate [illegible] gave him their influence and support.

"Pittsburgh.—There are at present no less than 12 new steam boats in the port of Pittsburg on the point of being finished and ready for business. Some of them are of beautiful model and workmanship, and one in particular, belonging to Messrs. Clark & co, is said to be likely to prove herself the fastest boat in America. The amount of steam and other boats furnished and fitted out at the port of Pittsburg, for one year, ending on the 1st of Jan. 1836, will amount to one million of dollars.

We learn that Col. William Duane, formerly editor and publisher of the Aurora newspaper, and since the father of Gov. The Advertiser says the cave is the most splendid yet discovered in this country—the stately columns reaching from the base to the summit, representing the fine orders of architecture, with the most beautiful spar as white as snow, interspersed among the columns in imitation of human fingers, birds, tortoise and various other animals, present to the spectator one of the most sublime and beautiful scenes that can be imagined. Its dimensions are not given, but it is said to contain several apartments and would require [illegible] thousand candles to properly illuminate it.

SONG OF THE AMERICAN GIRL.

Our hearts are with our native land,
Our song is for her glory;
Her warrior's wreath is in our hand,
Our lips breathe out her story.
Her lofty hills and valleys green
Are smiling bright before us;
And like a rainbow sign is seen
Her proud flag waving o'er us.

And there are smiles upon our lips
For those who meet her foemen,
For Glory's star knows no eclipse
When smiled upon by woman.
For those who brave the mighty deep,
And scorn the threat of danger,
We've smiles to cheer—and tears to weep
For every ocean danger.

Our hearts are with our native land,
Our song is for her freedom;
Our prayers are for the gallant band
Who strike where honor leads them.
We love the taintless air we breathe,
We'll twine for him a tadeless wreath
Who scorns a tyrant's power.

They tell of France's beauties rare,
Of Italy's proud daughters;
Of Scotland's lasses—England's fair,
And nymphs of Shannon's waters;
But not all their boasted charms,
Though joined in a grand chorus,
Our glory lies in Freedom's arms—
A Freeman for a lover!
