The people of Sowth Carolina are prosecuting with a zeal and vigour highly honorable to them, the magnificent project of connecting the city of 'Charleston with the river Ohio, by a rail road. The expense of the work is estimated at ten millions of dollars, and in order to cover all contingencies, they propose to raise stock have already been taken up in South Carolina, and it is believed that one or two millions more will be taken in that State alone. Here are five millions sure, without counting what will be obtained from private subscriptions in Tennessee, from North Carolina, Ohio, Indiana and all the other states through which the route will pass, or which will be benefited by it. Time only is wanting for the completion of this gigantic work, which will immortalize its projectors and confer incalculable benefits upon the whole nation. A lateral rail road from Nashvills would connect the New Orleans road with the other, and could be constructed without much difficulty, as the intervening country is peculiarly well adapted to such a work. Here, then, is another and most powerful motive for proceeding vigorously with the corresponding improvements in our own immediate vicinity—Concinnati, Louisville, Lexington, Nashville. Charleston, an I the intermediate towns would be connected by a route to be travelled over in two, three and four days, with the City of New Orleans, with the Bayou Bienvenu and the Gulf of Mexico. It is not extravegant to predict that in five years after these undertaking shall be accomplished, the wealth and population of New Orleans will be more than quadrupled, and the value of all real estate augmented in an equal proportion.

The redicals in England have hit upon a most extraordinary mode of bringing the house of lords to reason—which if adopted and resolutely adhered to, cannot fail of being effectual. It was suggested by which if adopted and resolutely adhered to, cannot fail of being effectual. It was suggested by Mr Henry Lython Bulwer, member of parliament, in a letter to one of his constituents: his advice is to stop the payment of the military force employed in Iteland. This would bring the tories to the alternative of yielding to the spirit of the times and combining in the projects of reform with the rest of their countrymen, or being left without protection for the tithes in The following article furnishes some very novel and curious information: We had no idea that the Masers FRS.
