Cotton—The intelligence occasioned by the receipt of the favorable advices from Europe has continued in an increased degree, resulting in an advance of 1 of a cent per lb on all descriptions. On the date of our last the sales were unusually large, amounting to about 3000 bales, they have since been than exceeded, swingeingly, however, to-day, there having been fewer large parcels dispersed of as the demand is still active. The business includes 3000 bales Uplands at 9½ a 11, principally for ship at 9½ cents; 1500 Mobile, 1100 at 10½, chiefly good for ship at 10½; 500 New Orleans, 200 at 11½, and 500 Florida 10 a 11½ cents, forming a total of 6000 bales. The arrivals have been 2160 bales.

Sugars—The markets without variation, but the transactions have been extremely limited, having in part been prevented by the unfavorable state of the weather yesterday. The only sales that have come to our knowledge comprise about 150 hhds Brown Havana at 7¾ a 8¾; and an equal quantity of Whites at 11 a 11½ cents, on the usual credit.

Tobacco—We learn of no transactions in any description entitled to notice.

CINCINNATI, Jan 10.

Pork—The fine bracing weather which we have had for some few days back, seems to have had a corresponding effect in the views of the Drovers. They are very firm as to advance up on last quotations.

We quote Light Pork to day $7,62½ a $7,75 per 100 lbs.

Heavy hogs weighing 300lbs and upwards) $6 to 6,25.

The weather being too for slaughtering, and at the same time unfavorable for driving the roads being so hard hogs cannot well travel; the number on the pens have been diminished down to some 6 or 7000.

Theatrical. St. Charles.

We learn with the utmost pleasure that Miss Rainey (the late Miss Watson) whose first appearance in New Orleans as Julia Mannering was hailed with such distinguished approbation, inaugured for the production of the elegant and interesting Opera of Le Sommambula. We know of no artiste as well calculated to personate the lovely Amina and give effect to the entrancing power of this justly celebrated and soul stirring opera.

The whig presses cannot forgive Mr Slidell for asserting that the National Bank question was connected with abolition—he has incurred the unpardonable censure of the to journals by attempting to render the subject of a National Bank, already so odious that it can scarcely be tolerated, still more loathesome, by coupling it with the revolting principles of the Northern Fanatics. It is readily perceived that the unpopularity of Mr. Biddle's darling would be prodigiously increased in the Southern portion of the confederacy, if it were clearly proved that a union of sentiment existed between the friends of that institution, and the democracy of the city. The office can are hence not unreasonably alarmed at such a discovering prospect, and it becomes a part of their bounden duty steadily to repudiate and deny the existence of any such bond of union. But a simple disclaimer constitutes no support—rather unsolicited as it were against the patent testimony of demonstrative reasoning and undeniable fact. The position assumed by Mr Slidell may appear to the Whig with novel and startling, and we do not question that those of the South, at least, are totally free from the contaminating character, but it is not the less remarkable that in the North, the friends of abolition are the sneering remaining champions of a National Bank. The proof of this is to be found in the facts that the abolition party in the Northern States is authentically embodied to make the scale at any time preponderate in a doubtful contest, and to use the expression of Mr. Slidell, the several has grown so powerful, that they are courted by politicians for the purpose of numerical strength. During the recent elections which, in several of the Northern States, terminated in favor of the Bank party, it is well known to all the antimasons voted in a body with that party, and that upon the principle principle that knowing the abominations to be decidedly hostile to their execrable doctrines, it became a matter of interest with them to strengthen as far as possible to exist the present tumultuous from other, under which circumstances, a chance would be at least presented of electing to his place some individual more favorable to their views.

Again, let the vote on the subject of Mr Patton's resolutions be examined, and it will be seen that with few exceptions, the members who voted in favor of that measure of concession to the South were gentlemen friendly to the present administration, while those who sided with Mr Adams and his anti-slavery band were among the strongest opponents to the present Government, and the pledged advocates of a National Bank. This fact presents a conclusion not easily explained away—the vote was a test of the strength of the anti-slavery party in the House—it so happened that then that nearly every one of the 74 members who voted against it belonged to the party that believes in the indispensable necessity of a great national regulator!

We are not surprised that the Whigs should reject with scorn the alleged admission between the sanctions of Mr. Biddle and the partisans of abolition, for a conviction to this effect would enable to the United States Bank the undying reputation and opposition of all the slave holding States. The assertion is not made that the Whigs are Abolitionists—the fact only is stated that the abolitionists as a body are the friends of National Bank, that they would an extensive aid in creasing influence at the northern portion of the confederacy, and that they mayfly offering a union between their views and the Bank party, at once secure to the views of the opposition, and give a powerful impetus to their own unhappy designs.

Florida.

The steamer Constitution arrived on the Delaware, at Savannah and proceeded thence to Charleston. She had on board 20 Indians composed of warriors, women and children, who had been captured some time previously by a party under Captain Bell of the dragoons.

By a letter from Florida to the Editor of the Georgian it is announced that a reconnoiter of artillery 400 strong under command of Capt. Porter, embarked on the Indian River, in vessels other the aforegoing; they were not heard on that vicinity, they seem to proceed immediately to the St Lucie river, about 50 miles further south, and cut off the retreat of the Indians to the glades on the Cape. The were supposed to be concentrated between the Sebastian and St Lucie rivers.

Washington

Mr Calhoun's 15th resolution was again brought before the senate on the 16th inst. The Baltimore American observes that "Mr C. has undertaken no easy task in forcing his resolutions through the fiery ordeal which they have undergone." The subject from the first drafting of the resolutions to the present moments, appears to have been a sycophantic desire that a decisive, irrevocable opinion should be extracted from congress on the subject of abolition. He has been the foremost champion of the south on this arduous struggle against the fanaticism of the north, and his vindication of her rights will be remembered with gratitude even by those who seek in other respects, to depreciate his well-earned political renown.

The fifth resolution after a most animated opposition, was amended by Mr Niles, nearly to the same effect, as was proposed by Mr Clay—viz, that the District of Columbia being ceded by two states in which slavery exists, it would be by implication, a breach of faith to those states, to abolish slavery in the District. This amendment was sorely complained of by Mr Calhoun, who declared it to be no work and undermined. The discussion was, again, conducted by the himself and Mr Clay—and after some time the vote was taken on the amendment of the latter, and stood—ayes 19, noes 28. The vote was reconsidered and finally the amendment of Mr Clay, modified by Mr Niles, passed by a vote of 30 to 8.

Mr Webster was opposed to the amendment, the principle of which he denied—he was answered by Mr Buchanan who said that if Maryland and Virginia, while ceding the ten miles square, had contemplated the abolition of slavery as near the seat of government, they would never have granted the portion of land—as this section of the country, under such circumstances, would be converted into an asylum for runaway slaves! Clay agreed fully with Buchanan, and Mr Webster closed the discussion by expressing his firm conviction that Congress had as much right to enfranchise slaves with money, as to take from the Treasury, funds to build an arsenal, jail or any object for the convenience or use of government.

But a single resolution now remains, the fate of which we shall probably learn tomorrow.

In the house nothing of importance took place.

CANADA.

One of our slips contains an account of the Schlosser affair from the Canada side. It does not differ very substantially from the statements received by the various journals of the frontier, excepting that it is asserted that the boat was not a mere on property, that she belonged to McKenzie, and was under his flag, tricolor and two stars, armed by his men.

A letter from Buffalo to Albany of the fourth instant, states that Mr. McKenzie was arrested by the Marshal, in that city, on the authority of a writ issued by Judge Conkling, the United States district Judge.

At Niagara Falls on the 3d inst. not less than 3,000 men were under arms. Several of the men engaged in the outrage are known, some of them make public boast of the act; the names of four of them being Capt. Mosher, deputy sheriff McLeod, Mcdonald, and Thomas McCormick. Depositions of two eye-witnesses, who were on the boat at the time of the attack, have been taken, and steps commenced to secure an indictment for murder, against those who were identified.

Governor Head arrived at Chippewa on the 3d inst with 18 regular and 8 militia. A correspondent of the Rochester Democrat states that he was at first greatly incensed at McNab for having exceeded his orders, but afterwards became good natured and reconciled.

General Arcularius, Commissary General of New York, yesterday demanded the prisoners of the cannon belonging to the State, and now on Navy Island.

This request was declined by General Van Rensselaer.

It is said that a number of gentlemen residing upon the frontier are making an effort either to reconcile the belligerents, or to obtain an agreement from governor Head, to permit Van Rensselaer to obtain a flag-boat, unmolested upon the main land, where the battle might be fairly fought. A passport to the same letter observes, that Van Rensselaer refuses to accept an unmolested landing should it be proffered him? The latter expresses "blow hot or be a battle."

Senate of Louisiana—Mr. C Derbigny, President.

Sitting of Jan. 17th, 1838.

Mr JOHNSON presented a petition, from certain inhabitants of the city of Lafayette, Jefferson parish, by reason of the large business now transacted in that city, that the Legislature would pass a law creating an office of Notary and Recorder in said city. The petition, on motion of the member who presented it, was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. PENN, in the stead of the Committee on the Judiciary, to which had been referred the bill for fixing the damages for protested bills of exchange, reported the original bill with amendments.

On motion of Mr. Penn, the bill was ordered to be printed.

Mr. Scott, in the name of the committee on unfinished business, said at appointing sundry, engrossed several bills, which under consideration, viz:

An act relating to the court of sessions of the Parish of Iberville, and that of West Baton Rouge.

An act to incorporate the Washington Institute.

Mr. Hoa moved that the last bill should be laid aside definitely on the table. He did not see the necessity of granting the proposed incorporation—the advantages to the public could not be great from it. Surely gentlemen would find no difficulty, or any other company belonging to the Legislature, might make a similar demand of the Legislature, if the bill was thus refused. Besides, it was not competent for the corporation to exercise the powers of banking, as proposed in the bill.

Mr. Penn said it was not the intention of the bill to create a bank, but merely to give the corporation the power of receiving deposits, and of discounting notes payable at sight.

Mr. Scott said that the bill was only at the first reading, the only motion which could be made was that it be rejected, and he hoped that gentlemen would not be precipitate in their decision.

Mr. Hoa withdrew his motion and moved to lay the bill on the table, subject to the call of the house and that the bill be printed, and the subject to be understood as interpreting the decision that the people were competent to change the constitution by calling a convention.

The bill to extend the right of suffrage was next in order. It requires a poll-tax of one dollar upon every white male inhabitant of Louisiana.

Mr. Bringier moved to change it to fifty cents.

Mr. Lewis was opposed to the change—he said a man who was unwilling to pay one dollar for the privilege of voting, was unworthy of it.

Mr. Bringier moved the indefinite postponement of the bill.

Mr. Bullitt moved to limit the exercise of the Elective Franchise, who had resided two years in the state.

Mr. Slidell said as five years residence in the state would be necessary to the parish. He was averse to throwing any obstacles in the way of the naturalization of foreigners, and was opposed to the bill.

Mr. Bullitt explained Mr. Slidell to modify the amendment so as to require three years residence in the state.

Mr. Slidell declined. He said he was opposed to a further extension of the right of suffrage.

Mr. Avery moved a question that all such voters should make out the balance in majority that they lived the required residence before being permitted to vote.

Mr. Kenner said it was one consistent whether we should be governed by a floating population, or restricted to the state—it was another and an important question whether we should be governed by the city of New Orleans. In my parish, said Mr R the population of the state of Louisiana, more than in any given to the residence of said persons or and they are already proud to be said upon the before said court of Record, and to vote at the next election, as if unlook. A. M. where voters, if any have can, who the proper of the said parish should not be granted and the charged from such oath.

By order of the Recorder A M Lee Judge, publication of the said order, this 17th day of January, A. D. 1838.
