Banks.

The train of evils which were expected to follow the application of the veto of the Executive to the Bank Bill, are now in full and unchecked operation. The bank—untrammelled by the restrictive provisions of the last law—still pursue their career of injustice, aggrandizing and sustaining the few, and oppressing and oppressing the many. The means forced from the honest, humble and plodding citizen or merchant, are, as usual, devoted to propping up and pampering the already gorged and bloated speculator—monopoly and favoritism still preside over the counsels of the Bank Directors, and the vices of mal-administration and mismanagement still continue to flourish.

It seems that by the late agreement among the monied institutions, many of them have been enabled to commence a partial resumption of discounts, inconsiderable as this is, it would nevertheless be a seizable fact as a source of relief, were it not that the generosity of these institutions is still confined within narrow boundaries—the golden stream all scanty and insufficient as it is, finds no other channel for its circulation than the contracted conduit of bank favoritism. The abuses of the system which have been, are now as ominous and glaring as almost to conceal its uses, will unquestionably continue until another legislative session shall afford some prospect of ultimate relief. But what are we to expect from the wisdom and firmness of our representatives? Some of them will doubtless, as happened at the late session, be seated, and others menaced in such an extremity. We shall, perhaps, behold other flagrant instances of mysterious changes effected in some of the most influential and talented members, in whom certainly we could not see operated so effectively by ordinary means. Banks can lend, and Banks can borrow, whose the last interest in the 2d municipality, the 2d district in the 3d municipality, and the 16th day of May next, an election for numerous officers to be voted for in each of the aforesaid districts, will take place on that day.

Banks can lend, and Banks can borrow, whose the last interest in the 2d municipality, the 2d district in the 3d municipality, and the 16th day of May next, an election for numerous officers to be voted for in each of the aforesaid districts, will take place on that day.

Sash are the traits of unrestricted powers when concentrated in the hands of a few. That banking institutions are useful, that they are essentially necessary in a country which, like ours, teems with untold resources, it were vainness to doubt. But equally senseless is it to question their mischievous tendency, when the power that creates them places insufficient barriers against the rapacious attacks of individual aggrandizement. As the facility of such power is towards abuse, so its social power is infinitely the most dangerous, because commanding a potent lever, and a broad and dangerous field for its exercise. It should therefore be carefully fenced in by wholesome restraints—every avenue to corruption and abuse should be sedulously watched and unremittingly protected.

In the private relations of man self-interest and the fear of censure guard him generally from the commission of dishonest actions, but where the power of defrauding the public is mainly rendered easily attainable, but is masked by the specious disguise of public utility, it is grasped with avidity, and practised to the most miserable extent. Viewed in the light, it would seem, that corruption and public turpitude are not incompatible. Hence the legislature should vigilantly and jealously protect its public institutions from every encroachment, and should act as though in all who apply for charters and privileges, they beheld the covert foot of private interest peeping from beneath the robe of public good.

Specie Payments.

The indications of a speedy resumption throughout the whole northern section of the confederacy, the return to the resumption of their issues, are sufficiently abundant to induce us to anticipate a similar policy here long, in every part of the Union. In Philadelphia even, where Mr Biddle entrenches himself in his strong hold, and where he wields a power that is considered almost irresistible, the moral sense of the community is beginning to obtain the ascendancy, and the specious arguments contained in his memorable letter, are of insufficient force against the overwhelming demonstrations of public opinion, elicited by the conduct of the New York banks.

A meeting of citizens was held at the County Court House, Philadelphia, relative to a resumption of specie payments by the banks of that city. It is represented by the Ledger to have been a tremendous gathering—the room and passages being closely and completely packed. The editor remarks, "we do not know who the officers of the meeting were, or what resolutions were adopted, as we were unable to go further than the steps leading from the street, and were obliged to follow the example of many others and depart from an inability to hear any of the proceedings." We shall, probably, in the next mail be enabled to lay the results of the meeting before our readers.

Congress 2nd May.

In the Senate after the engrossment of several bills, Mr Clay asked for a second reading of his resolution touching the banks and the currency. Mr Wright moved its reference to the committee of finance. Mr Clay opposed the motion—he thought there could be no objection to the reception of bank notes and of New York bank notes, for example, in the south and south west, for such notes would always command a premium in the south and south west. He considered that the time had arrived for positive action—that if a national bank could not be had, which bank would aid and secure resumption, something should be had that would accomplish all that can be done without a national bank, to effect this object.

Mr Calhoun and the banks were about to resume specie payments without the aid of the general government. So much for leaving nature to work out its own course. He would do nothing to aid the union of the banks and government—he would never aid a reunion and would do all he could to prevent any union. As for a national bank it was out of the question in any shape or form.

Messrs Davis, Benton and Preston continued the debate, which assumed a discursive character, and the subject had not disposed of the motion of reference at the departure of the mail. In the house, the discussion on the motion to recommit the report on the duty with instructions to report the testimony alone, without any argument, was still continued, and no definite result arrived at, when the correspondence closed, of which we have made a summary.

Mississippi Election.

The Vicksburg Sentinel states that sufficient returns of the late election have been received to render the success of Messrs Prentiss and Word undoubted, the former by a majority ranging from one to two thousand and the latter by about four or five hundred less. The editor observes, that this election is no test of political principles in the state. It turned generally on the opinions of the people in relation to the validity of the November election. It is upon this ground decidedly, and not upon the merits of Mr Clay and a national bank that Mr Prentiss presented himself to the people of Mississippi, and on this ground alone will Mr Prentiss take his seat. He adds that the state rights men generally, together with some of the democratic party, voted for the members elect, while many of them both refused to vote at all, because they declared that the November election was in conformity with the constitution and laws of the state.

☞ Mrs Farren's benefit, which was postponed yesterday, takes place this Evening. We solicit for her the warmest plaudits of the public.

Tampico.

We have been politely favored with a copy of the following letter, the contents of which the mercantile community will duly appreciate:—

off S W Pass, May, 1838.

Sir—The U S ship Natchez is off the South West Pass, and I am ready to proceed to Tampico with any communications the Merchants of New Orleans may wish to send to that place—you will be pleased immediately to communicate this fact to them, and del ver whatever letters you may wish to send there, to the officer who lands on this, without delay, that he may return to me by sunset, should it be necessary I shall alter visiting Tampico, return to the Pass and communicate again with you.

I am Sir respectfully,
Your Obedient Servant,
BENJAMIN PAGE,
Commander U S Ship Natchez.

To Mr Jno Crosby,
and Merchants of New Orleans.

The letter bag of the U S Ship Natchez, is at the Louisiana St re Insurance office, corner of Royal and Bienville, where all communications for Tampico from residents of New Orleans, will be received and conveyed thither, if sent immediately. An officer of the ship is in the city and will take charge of them.

Steam Ships.

The New York papers scarcely speak of any thing else but the successful voyages of the Sirius and Great Western—the practicability of the passage is now considered conclusively demonstrated, and the fact of its performance so often disproves the mathematical calculations of so eminent a man as Dr. Lardner, who undertaken to prove the entire impossibility of its success. The only question which now remains, observes a writer in the Evening Post, is, whether the greater regularity and speed, with which the passage is effected in steam vessels, will compensate for the additional cost; or whether in fact, on balancing all considerations, any additional cost would be incurred. This question may, we think, be satisfactorily solved by reflecting that not only will the length of the voyage be considerably curtailed by the employment of steam ships, thus saving a portion of the expense for food, &c., but that the larger accommodations of these vessels will render a smaller number sufficient for the purposes of navigation. The improvements, too, which are constantly progressing in this department of art, will not fail ere long to establish the system on a basis quite as economical as that practised in the construction and voyages of ships.

After all, an additional expenditure should be a minor consideration in comparison with the immense advantages to be derived to both countries, from the increased speed, safety and certainty of the voyage. The direct increase of cost will be more than compensated by the manifold indirect benefits that will flow from the rapid communication between the two continents.

We perceive, by the by, that the English board of "British skill" having first accomplished the passage across the Atlantic by means of steam. They, we have learned with equal pride and pleasure, the steam ship Savannah, built by Captain Fisher of New York and commanded by Captain Rogers, went into an Europe and visited numerous harbors on the European continent. The log-book of the Savannah has been deposited in the Merchants' Exchange, in the city of New York, and from this it appears, that she took her departure from Savannah to Liverpool, on the 25th of May, and anchored in the river Mersey, on the 20th of June—passage 20 days. It follows therefore that "American skill" first demonstrated the practicability of the voyage.

☞ The Whigs begin to acknowledge Conservatism to be Whiggery in disguise. In triumphantly boasting of the election of Morris Burton and sheriff to the Virginia Legislature, they call them Whig Conservatives, and laid the result as a Whig victory. Admission manifests a becoming degree of candor and openness. We shall soon know exactly how to rate opposite parties and will learn fully how to estimate the value of names.

☞ The "New York Sun" says that unfashionable mercantile paper issued by merchants and not made payable four or five months ahead, is not negotiated by the brokers at 7 per cent, while Biddle's notes are not readily to be converted into cash at ten per cent discount.

The latter may be as really safe as the former in the long run, but such exhibitions of knavery and abandonment of all honorable principles would disgrace even the paper of the veriest Cossack in the world.

Alice or the Mysteries.—Although an attractive title, and heralded as the continuation of Edward Mavtravers, this new production of the facile brain of Bulwer, will be sure to be extensively read. It is announced by the New York publishers, but we are not certain whether it has yet been received in this city.

Mr Bulwer's last has been dramatised & brought out with great éclat in New York, as a grand spectacle drama. For the sake of economy, speculation, time, magic first and last scenes and stage effects, nothing yet produced on the New York stage can at all bear comparison with it. A long and successful run is anticipated.

Mr Clay's Resolution.—Mr Clay has long been distinguished for his powers of making great figures in order to obtain the most favorable position for his Tariff drove South Carolina almost to phrenzy, and in the last moment it was Mr Clay's compromise that saved the Union. The measure was blandly proclaimed as the work of a patriot, and his address to the Senate to-day to impute whatever of the mischief which the system of 1832 may have produced to the nullification party, and to insist that the compromise was not to be considered as a part of that system, is a piece of consummate effrontery. It is not to be supposed that the Senate has forgotten the manner in which the compromise was carried through, and how the Senate was literally precipitated into the measure by the menaces of the House. Mr Clay's present position is that the compromise was a measure of his own, and that he was not to be called to account for the manner in which it was carried through. Mr Clay's resolution is a mere trick to divert attention from the fact that the compromise was a measure of his own, and that he was not to be called to account for the manner in which it was carried through. Mr Clay's resolution is a mere trick to divert attention from the fact that the compromise was a measure of his own, and that he was not to be called to account for the manner in which it was carried through.

Acute and masked battery of the Opera. A friend of one of the directors "Parson Brown" called to see him, and was told that he was engaged with a gentleman from Boston. He was introduced into the room, and found the director in close conversation with a man of very genteel appearance, who was introduced to him as Mr. Brown, of Boston. The director, after the usual salutations, resumed his conversation with Mr. Brown, and the parson sat down to wait patiently for his turn. Mr. Brown was explaining to the director the principles of the Unitarian faith, and the parson, who had been a preacher of that faith himself, listened with great attention to the arguments of Mr. Brown, which were certainly very ingenious and plausible. The parson, after hearing Mr. Brown for some time, rose from his seat, and addressing himself to the director, said, "Sir, I have been a Unitarian preacher myself, and I have heard all the arguments which this gentleman has advanced, but I never heard them urged with so much ingenuity and force before. I am convinced that I have been in the wrong, and I am now ready to join your church." The director, who had been listening to the parson with astonishment, replied, "Sir, I am not a Unitarian myself, and I know nothing about it."
