

WILMINGTON

THE WILMINGTON DAILY NEWS

WILLIAM HARRISON
OF OHIO
FOR VICE PRESIDENT
JOHN TYLER
OF VIRGINIA

LOUISIANA ELECTORAL TICKET
WILLIAM DIXON, N. Y.
LEOPOLD BATRAN, ILLINOIS
JOSEPH PEARL, MASS.
JACOB COOPER, NEW YORK
SETH LEWIS, BOSTON

THE WILMINGTON FIRST DISTRICT
THE BROWNS, WHITES

NEW ORLEANS

MONDAY MORNING, MARCH 30, 1840.

THE NATIONALITY.

The question of the nationality appears to occur-

every third, and the third of the fourth, congregation all evenly count in favor of carrying their candidate in nomination to vote the position in which he stands in relation to this interesting contest.

In the first place, there is the regular before narrow, narrow, and thin; Mr. Moore is a man of no party, disengaged. Next follows Mr.

Moore, a hybrid compound of neutrality, independence, and anti-slavery Americans; thus follow Mr.

Garrison, a whig; Mr. Brown, likewise a whig;

lastly, Mr. Fawcett, by some considered to be the only candidate supported by all popular, able and earnest men, who will call the distinction of his status, wholly and solely.

It is difficult, amid the multiplicity of candidates, and the different issues under which they run, to arrive at a definite opinion as to the probable result.

It is very certain, that Mr. Garrison will pull a very heavy load, but as KENNECOTT, one of his co-

operators, is like a man of no party, and will

carry a considerable number of party votes, together with a certain proportion of the votes of the New

and German nationalities, it is by no means certain that Mr. Garrison will be elected. On the other hand, Mr. Fawcett will get the whole field.

Mr. Moore is a man of no party, who is known to be a staunch whig, and his election would be extremely

acceptable to a majority of the party.

Whether Mr. Fawcett has acted wisely or not in becoming the Native American candidate, it is not our purpose to determine; but he doubtless

the whig vote, but as KENNECOTT, one of his co-

operators, is like a man of no party, and will

carry a considerable number of party votes, together

with a certain proportion of the votes of the New

and German nationalities, it is by no means certain that Mr. Fawcett will be elected. On the other hand, Mr. Fawcett will get the whole field.

Mr. Moore is a man of no party, who is known to be a staunch whig, and his election would be extremely

acceptable to a majority of the party.

Taking all things into consideration, we feel that either Mr. Fawcett or Mr. Moore will be the victor, a candidate, some of the others will give respectable votes, but none, as far as we have been able to ascertain, will rank as well as the gentlemen named.

The election of either could be fairly called a party's victory, for on the one hand, a body of votes will be for a whig, and a body of votes for an otherwise neutral, and another considerable vote for although the whigs have no regularly nominated candidate in the field, yet Mr. Fawcett is known to be a staunch whig, and his election would be extremely acceptable to a majority of the party.

But what is to be the result? We shall see in the whole, if the whigs can hold their ground, and their strength, the wings will be safe, and their success will depend upon the strength of their party, and upon the support of their friends.

These are the main points of the question, and we shall see how they stand at the election.

THE WHIGS.

THE WHIGS.