ASPHALTUM OF SICILY.—The subscriber, sole agent at New Orleans for the mining company of CRYSTEL ASPHALTUM, has the honor to inform proprietors and contractors, that he can, for the future, in conformity with his contract, send a regular supply of this article, the above company, fulfil all orders addressed to him, whatever may be the quantity required.

The Asphaltum (simply well known here) is a mineral substance, which becomes as strongly the cement of the stone, and even more durable than the stone itself, and instead of being injured by time, becomes the more indestructible. It can be procured in fragments, and is principally employed for flooring stores, yards, kitchens, stables, pavements, terraces, the interior of houses, the under flooring of rooms, &c. (For example, the apartments in the Lafayette Bank, &c.)

Is the most durable natural cement adversely adapted to shutting vessel cellars, to joining masonry together, and all other materials exposed to the action of water. Its impenetrability to water is unique—it is the only thing of any use, since it only commences in mixing it with a certain quantity of pitch and sand.

It is to be remarked that this Asphaltum, when taken up after many years, is capable of being again melted, and becomes as good as new, without losing more than 5 per cent. It preserves eternally from corruption the pitch mingled with it, for it is this article alone is employed in the embalming of mummies, and other bodies which have to undergo the action of time.

Persons wishing to confide to him this branch of their occupation, are certain to succeed, have ever since they may be to know.
