THE PRESIDENT

The President's message to Congress today was a significant one. It outlined the administration's policies and goals for the remainder of the year. The President emphasized the need for continued unity and cooperation among all Americans in the fight against the Axis powers. He also announced several new executive orders, including one that authorized the President to take such action as he might deem necessary to enforce the laws of the United States.

The message was well-received by Congress and the public alike. Many praised the President for his clear and concise statements of policy. Others, however, expressed concern over some of the President's proposals, particularly those relating to the war effort and the treatment of Japanese-Americans.
