The better opinion we think is, that his opinion; nor is there any thing in its spirit to counteract it. The reasons which induced a limits on of the time for the passage of a convention t ind with without debate there is no option in the lopted in order to secure the action of the legislatur ind arrangement; or whether a period was adopted and arrangement; or whether a person was adopted for the discussion of the bill to prevent the whale, res-sion from being consumed in debating the numberless opics which it naturally suggests, the mere concurrence of both houses in its passage in the time prescri-bed, brings it clearly within the spirit, as well a the letter of the constitution. The same reasoning applies to the signing of the bill by the executive, ad

This section refers to all bills which arise in the or linary course of legislation; but that it has no rela-tion to a bill of this nature may be interred from the Mode of resising the Constitution.

To that article we must therefore look for the mode f revising the constitution, and when its provis great advantages to be derived from a settled form of The Merites appertaining to the passage of other bills course of legislation, and dignified by a sep her bills are passed at any time and by any majority Hence no bill of this nature can pass by accident; i ust receive an absolute majority. When the bill asset this severe ordeal, the matter is referred to the rticle devoted exclusively to the subject, and detail itution, both as respects the action of the legislate fahich it is an important part. This argument is strengthened by recurring to the nature of republican forms of government. It is an admitted axiom that the people have a right to change their government whenever they please. A bill the that requires the concurrence of a majority of all the members elected to both houses of the legislature, and afterwards before it attains the object embraced in it must be supported by an absolute and unqualified ma-jority of all the people entitled to vote for two separate and distant periods of voting, needs no other protection. It cannot compass any end before the sove eignty of the state-sets it seal upon it. It is a dead etter until the people, who own the government and for whose benefit and behoof it was formed, solemnly into force upon their passage, are the proper shjects of executive revision-but in convention bills the people nave not left the matter with their servants; they choose to decide in their own persons upon them. The unanimous passage by both branches of the legislature and the governor's approval of furty convention bills could not call one unless the people also approve. The bill is to take the sense of the people, not the governor, upon the propriety of calling a conventioni ind hence the opinion that when the bill receives th
