NEW-ORLEANS, MONDAY EVENING, May 31,—7 p.m.

The accounts received yesterday by the steamship Caledonia, from Liverpool, we regret to say are of a most unfavorable nature as regards our great staple. Trade in the manufacturing districts continued to be dull beyond precedent, and large stocks of goods and yarns are represented as being on hand. Even the most positive intelligence from this side in relation to the large falling off of the crop, was insufficient to counteract the baneful influence of so gloomy a state of affairs, and a further decline had been experienced in the Liverpool Cotton market of ¼d. @ ⅜d. on the inferior descriptions, whilst the finer grades were less affected, having only fallen ⅛d. The sales for the entire month of April did not exceed 6[?],000 bales; and the stock on the 30th of the same month amounted to 631,000 bales against 27[?],83[?] at the same time last year, being an excess of 1[?]6,000 bales. To add to this existing want of animation, a meeting of the spinners in the principal manufacturing towns had been held, when they agreed to work only four days a week, to commence on the 3d of May. The Havre market, as usual, had gone from one extreme to the other, and a fall of ¼ a ⅜ c. had taken place on the ordinary qualities; and the latest advices, under date of the 21st instant, represent no appreciable reduction to operate even at a further reduction.

The question now naturally recurs—What will be the result of the late shipments laid in at far higher prices than the state of the markets on the other side will warrant? In answer to this it is very evident that the prospect before us is far from encouraging; when we take into consideration the enormous stock of the raw material and twist held on the continent together with the extremely limited demand for goods both for home consumption and for export; it is obvious that it a change for the better does not shortly occur, our shippers will find but a sorry return for their operations. On the other hand it may be said, that it is scarcely possible to presume that such a great abundance of money, and a fair prospect for an average harvest, the cotton trade cannot continue for any length of time in such an utter state of prostration.

As might naturally have been expected, this news has thrown a complete gloom over our market, and buyers have almost entirely declined operating for the present. We have not heard of any sales to day; and if holders were now willing to force their stocks on the market, a decline of at least ¼ cent would have to be submitted to. It is impossible however to foretell what prices will do. During the whole course of the season we have been so much at variance with other markets that we should not be at all surprised to see maintained the high rates hitherto paid. We deem it proper to leave out our figures to-day, as they must be considered nominal.

The Tobacco market continues in the same depressed state previously noticed; nor are the late advices from Europe calculated to allay the existing stagnation. It was rumored to-day that a large lot had been offered by one of the factors at rates considerably below those hitherto current; but we were unable to trace this report to any correct authority, notwithstanding diligent inquiries to that effect. The stock now on sale embraces about 15,000 hhds.

NEW-YORK: MAY 21.

There was a considerable sale of Teas by auction this morning. The prices obtained, considering quality, which was generally ordinary to-day, were equal to those obtained at the last sales a week ago. The advance asked at private sale this week was not sustained.

Genesee Flour is $4 74, with a fair demand; Georgetown, $4 75, with but little demand; Ohio and Michigan, $4 50 to $4 63.

The sales of Cotton are 500 bales at ¼c decline from the prices of last week.

State stocks are selling largely at the Broker's Board, as will be seen.—United States Bank shares rose. The bills are to day 10 ⅛ cent. discount.

NEW-ORLEANS,

TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 1, 1841.

THE LATE NEWS FROM ENGLAND DEFEAT OF THE MINISTRY BRITISH CORN LAWS.

The intelligence from England received by the Caledonia, furnishes one most important item—we mean the signal defeat of the ministry in Parliament on the Irish Registration Bill. The mere discomfiture of the present Cabinet, or the formation of another, would be in themselves circumstances but slightly affecting the interests of this country; but the result to which the late striking manifestation of popular discontent will most probably lead, are sufficiently momentous and extended in their character, to require a passing notice.

When Lord John Russell perceived that his party was clearly in a minority, he announced as a dernier and final measure a proposed modification of the Corn Laws. We are told that great excitement followed the declaration, and we do not wonder at it. The grinding tyranny of this atrocious system has continued for years and years without the slightest mitigation, and in spite of every demonstration of popular hatred and abhorrence. When therefore Lord John Russell proposed a thorough radical system so odious and apparently so unchangeable, all parties might well be astonished. The only persons not taken by surprise were the ministers themselves. They had doubtless for some time been sedulously noting the signs of the times, and watching their fast waning popularity. They must have known the fate that was to befal the Irish Registration bill, and doubtless, in anticipation of being thrown into a disgraceful minority, they had concocted the scheme of altering the Corn Laws, as the last rallying point for an appeal to popular support. The history of all the circumstances leading to this great measure of reform would reveal the curious process by which the grasping tenacity with which power is clung to, and the desperate efforts made to retain it, are occasionally rendered subservient to purposes of comprehensive and substantial national good. There can not be a question that the Corn Laws and the bloated landed aristocracy which they pamper and maintain, would have never suffered even a touch from the finger of reform.

The people might have driven their cartloads of petitions annually into parliament—a liberal press might have exhausted its energies in striking at the monstrous monopoly—eloquence might have continued to denounce it in strains of overwhelming indignation, and starving Chartists might have yearly spread sedition through the empire,—and all in vain, had not ministers perceived that they must identify themselves with some vital measure of resistless popularity, or resign a power which the people refused to ratify. This is the secret of the present movement, and is a beautiful illustration of the mode in which good is elicited out of evil.

Whether the proposition to impose a fixed duty on foreign corn will be at once submitted to the present parliament, or that body will be dissolved and a new election ordered, is yet uncertain. It appears that Lord John Russell will risk the passage of the bill in a House of Commons which had already shown so marked a repugnance to the measures of the ministry. Besides, the ministers will still in probably conclude, that by identifying themselves with the anti-corn party, a new election may secure them a decided preponderance in parliament, and enable them to carry out the project without difficulty or delay.

It is, however, enough for us that the Corn Laws are to be touched—that these hoary monuments of despotism are at length to crumble under the assaults of an enlightened public opinion. We rejoice at it, as we gladden at the extension of liberty and the destruction of tyranny—at a blow wielded by an arm of power again the giant Privilege—at the amputation of a moiety of that vast baton of wealth and influence wielded by the landed aristocracy of Great Britain.—We rejoice at it because it will open to honest industry the benefit of wholesome emulation, because it will remove from the humbler classes one barrier to their progress, while it will tend to diminish the exactions and the supremacy of those exalted by rank and opulence.

Not inconsiderable in a merely selfish point of view, will be the operation of a reform in the Corn Laws on this country. By a decrease in the restrictive duties on foreign corn, the vast granaries of our western country will, in a measure, supply with bread stuffs the famishing population of Great Britain. Though labor is high in America—the exhaustless fertility of the soil provides returns so bountiful for the husbandman's toil, that he will be enabled to export his superfluity and vend it in Europe, at a price that may successfully compete with that of the agricultural products of the continent. The advantages gained by the proximity of those parts of Europe which cultivate bread stuffs, can be compensated by the activity, energy and industry of our American farmer. We therefore consider the proposed modification of the corn laws as a wide field opened to American industry and enterprise, one which our countrymen with characteristic promptitude will take care quickly and thoroughly to cultivate.

We are indebted to the Grey Eagle for late Louisville papers.

The Boston Atlas.—This valuable paper is now edited by William Hayden, Esq. and Dr. Thomas M. Brewer, who are joint proprietors. We rejoice that it has fallen into such able hands, and feel the utmost confidence that, under the new administration, it will continue to maintain the reputation it acquired under the late lamented Haughton.

Accident at Sea.—The packet ship Susquehannah, arrived at Philadelphia a few days since, with her bowsprit, foretop gallant mast, and a part of her cut water carried away. She ran foul of a vessel on the night of the 4th May, near the Banks of Newfoundland, where she received the damage.

Winter has runaway quite suddenly from the North. The people there are sweltering and panting with heat—a few weeks ago, they were shivering with cold.

We copy the following statement from yesterday's Bulletin:

ATTEMPTED BURGLARY BY THREE POLICE OFFICERS.

Messrs. Rockwell and Greenough, Police officers of the Second Municipality, were yesterday morning brought up before Recorder Baldwin, and charged with attempting to rob the Treasurer's office of the Second Municipality. Their examination will take place this morning, when it is hoped the other delinquent, who made his escape, will be captured.

It appears that the robbery has been for a long time contemplated by the accused, and that all the circumstances connected with the scheme came to Captain Harper's knowledge shortly after the rascals had concocted the villainy, and he only waited the development of the plan to take them in the act. On Saturday he was led to believe that on that night the attempt would be made. He accordingly requested the aid of Lieut. Winters, and with him lay down in the square in front of the Municipality Hall, and soon perceived Greenough and Rockwell, with the other confederate in close confab. It was arranged that Greenough and the other should pick the lock, or rather unlock it, for they were provided with a key made from the mould of the original one, and with an axe to break open the safe and had every thing on their persons which plainly indicated their intentions. During this, Rockwell was to get the watchman who guarded the house out of the way. The honest Dutchman, however, could not so quickly be persuaded. He was informed by R. that there were some loafers out of the way a little distance, but he was back again before they could effect their purpose, and when coming towards the door they were attempting to unlock, Rockwell would whistle a peculiar tune, as had been planned between them. At last Rockwell persuaded the watchman that there was a most extraordinary horse of surpassing dimensions and beauty to be seen, which he said had just arrived in the city. This bait took, and they went to the named place, but behold no horse met their view. They returned, and the next attempt was to get him to go into the square to pick up some young urchins who might be sleeping there. They went up and found Capt. Harper and Winters lying flat on the ground. Here's a loafer exclaimed the Dutchman, and poked Capt. Harper a little with his wand of office, as a hint to be moving to the watch house. Rockwell said never mind their sleeping, leave them there—unfortunately for the ends of justice, however, Rockwell stooped down and saw his valiant Captain on the ground, who finding he was recognized, sprang up and seized the thief. Greenough and the other accomplice ran off immediately.—Greenough was found at his home, where he said he had been all the evening, the other, whose name will be given in due time, is not yet arrested.

Sudden Death.—Last evening, at 10 o'clock, Dr. Samuel S. Dickinson, one of the Lottery Commissioners, was found dead, near the Shot Tower, in Eutaw street. He was at his lodgings, in Pratt street, a short time before, and it is supposed he went out at the time of the alarm of fire, and must have fallen into a fit, as he had been complaining of illness for some time past. The Doctor was a native of Talbot county, Eastern Shore of Maryland, and an aged and highly respected citizen.—Baltimore Patriot.

Raleigh, May 21.—North Carolina—Out of the Woods.—We have the pleasure of submitting a list of the members elected from North Carolina, to the new Congress. The whigs have carried eight districts, the opposition only five, thus completely turning the tables upon their political adversaries. In the last Congress they had eight, and we had only five.

In publishing the subjoined list, it may not be amiss to remark, that in these days of impracticability, that all the whigs returned are good men and true, and will go without scruple for a United States Bank, should it become necessary to establish one, as the means of rescuing the country from its financial disorders.

McLeod.—The New York Journal of Commerce, of the 21st May, says:—"Agreeably to the order of the Supreme Court, issued yesterday, Alexander McLeod was this morning transferred from the custody of the Sheriff of Niagara county to that of Sheriff Hart of this city. All responsibility of the former in regard to him has now ceased. Until the decision of the Supreme Court McLeod will be confined in the House of Detention in Centre street, (where he is at present,) though doubtless he will be permitted to enjoy all reasonable indulgences. This decision, it is supposed, will not be made until the July term. The question to be decided is, whether he shall be discharged without trial. If the Court decide Yes, that, of course, will be the end of the business, so far as the courts are concerned; if Nay, then his counsel will take an appeal to the Court of Errors [the State Senate,] and ultimately, if necessary, to the Supreme Court of the States.

The New York senate has adopted resolutions instructing Messrs. Wright and Tallmadge to vote for a National Bank—the vote stood 15 to 10. The house of assembly has not yet acted on them.

Lord Sydenham, Governor General of Canada, will vacate his office next spring.

Extracts from English papers received by the Caledonia:

The Late Murder Case in Liverpool.—A feeling of deep commiseration for the wretched man who assassinated his child, and attempted to kill his wife, is very prevalent among influential parties in Liverpool. The following document has been handed about in relation to this melancholy catastrophe;—"Liverpool, April 28.—It is proposed by some parties who have known the unfortunate Mr. Jenner in times long gone by, at home and abroad, when he was respectedly connected, and doing a large business in the cotton trade —and who very sincerely deplore the melancholy events which have so recently occured to himself and his family—that a subscription should be opened for the purpose of raising a fund to support, educate, if necessary, and put in some way of getting an honest livelihood, the only remaining child, a boy about 13 years old, who appears to have shown very great courage and presence of mind under the awful and distressing circumstances by which he was surrounded, and is now left destitute in the world. It is further understood that Mrs. Jenner, if she should survive, shall be included in any arrangements that may be made for the disposal of the amount collected.

LORD PALMERSTON AND THE CHINA QUESTION.

[From a Ministerial Paper.]

A deputation from merchants connected with the China trade, had an interview with Viscount Palmerston in the course of the week, on the subject of the recent events in China. It would appear that the deputation rested their complaints mainly upon two points—viz. the inadequacy of the indemnity proposed to be paid by the Chinese government to this country, and the want of any sufficient security having been provided for the personal safety and independence of British residents in China by the arrangements which Captain Elliott was said to have entered into with the Chinese plenipotentiary. The answer of Viscount Palmerston was, we hear, to the effect, that as yet he was acquainted only with the principles agreed to between the plenipotentiaries, viz. that the emperor was to cede to the British crown a territorial possession in China, that an indemnity was to be paid to the British government, and that the official intercourse between the two countries was for the future to be conducted on terms of perfect equality. As yet his lordship knew nothing beyond the admission of these important principles; and, as it was expressly stated that the details were to be the subject of further negociation, it necessarily followed that it was impossible for his lordship to come to any conclusive opinion as to the acts of the British plenipotentiary until in full possession of the further negociations so alluded to.

This, we believe, substantially describes what occurred at the interview between the foreign secretary and the deputation, but of course we can speak only from report.

Inundations in France.—The Sémaphore of Marseilles, 26th ult, states that the Rhone had again overflowed all the low land between Tarascon and Arles, being the fourth time that such a calamity has happened within six months. The cause is attributed to the exceedingly heavy rains which have fallen for many days successively in the South of France. The full extent of the damage thus occasioned is not known.—This inundation is thus noticed by the Ministerial evening journal:—"The department of the Bouches du Rhone was, on the 24th ult., subjected to a fresh inundation. The dykes at Boulbon and Tarascon have been destroyed, and the land in the communes, as well as in that of Arles, are almost entirely covered with water, only the most elevated parts being left dry." The Courier of Nismes, 27th ult., in confirming the account of the new overflowing of the Rhone, says, that it has inundated all the plain between Beaucaire, Saint Giles, and Aiguesmortes, destroying the whole of the crops.

Extraordinary Preservation.—The Gazette des Postes de Frankfort of the 23d inst. states, that on the 18th inst. whilst the young Princess Wilhelmina was playing with her governess at one of the windows of the castle at Berlin, she imprudently reached too far forward, and fell out of the window, when fortunately a young journeyman shoemaker who was passing by caught the child in his arms. The attendants then brought the Princess to her father, who immediately handed his gold watch to the shoemaker, then sent for his father, loaded him with presents, and informed him that he would provide for his son.

Surgery at Sea.—During the late terrible gales in the Atlantic, a seaman in the American packet ship Philadelphia had the misfortune to fall from the rigging, and broke both his thigh bones, one of which was close to the hip, and a compound fracture. Captain E. E. Morgan (the sea at the same time running mountains high, and the vessel having been laboring in a hurricane for several days) had the humanity to do his best to save the unfortunate mariner. He at once took upon himself the office of surgeon, in promptly reducing the bones of both legs. The seaman did very well; and, incredible as it may appear, a cure was effected. On the arrival of the ship in London, the captain took him to Guy's; and the consulting surgeons declared that any student leaving the hospital with the credit of the skilful treatment exhibited in this case, might consider himself established in his profession.

Cheap Dinners in Paris.—The Commerce states that the day before yesterday the octroi officers at the Barriere du Combat seized 2,00 kilogrammes of horses flesh bringing into Paris, and that the police are at this time actively engaged in searching all the restaurants where dinners are under two francs a head are given, and where large quantities of bad meats are served up. The price of meats in Paris has never been known to be so high as at present.

Irish Tranquility.—The following pithy announcement appears in the Evening Packet:—"Tipperary.—This county is in a disturbed state, and outrages are of daily and nightly occurrence. No murders, however, have been committed within these few days."—Waterford Chronicle.

The Funded Debt, etc. of Great Britain and Ireland.—It appears from official reports on the subject now before us, that the public funded debt of Great Britain (exclusive of the capitals transferred to to the commissioners) amounted on the 5th of January, 1840, to £732,619,694 18s. 5d, and that of Ireland £33,897,969 18s. 11d.; making altogether £766,517,-684 17s 4d. The total annual charge upon which, including Ireland, amounted to £29,748,794 7s 8d, exclusive of the annual charge on capitals, &c. standing in the names of the commissioners. The Exchequer-bills outstanding and unprovided for on the 5th of January, 1840, amounted to 29,951,550, and on the 5th of Jan. 1859 to £24,026,650.

Pigeon Expresses.—The modern system of pigeon expresses possesses an extraordinary interest, as well on account of its rapid means of communicating the most important events, as of the curious and laborious mode by which it is set in operation. The birds by far the most valuable for this purpose are of the Antwerp breed, although it is not uncommon to train the English pigeons, called dragons, to carry expresses. They are trained when very young, or, as they are technically called, "squeakers," to fly between different towns and villages, commencing first at a space of only a few hundred yards, and so on, gradually increasing until they accomplish the required distance. They are usually trained to fly to intermediate stations between Dover and London, at which they are succeeded by other relays, but fly, in many instances, the whole distance from other places. The number lost in training is immense. The trade is principally in the hands of the Jews, and the emoluments arising therefrom are very considerable. There are a few instances in which capitalists and others having extensive monied and mercantile operations throughout Europe, maintain an establishment of their own, amongst whom is the Baron Rothschild, who, at Dover, rears and trains his own flight of pigeon expresses, with connecting branches throughout Germany and other parts of the Continent. The establishment at Dover consists of about 400 birds, with a keeper, whose wages are 25s. a week. The expense of feeding the birds is considerable—as much as 25s. a week being consumed at Dover in beans alone, whilst the entire collection is supposed to have cost at least £2,000. The express is sometimes tied to the middle feather of the tail, by passing a thread with a needle through the stem, but more commonly attached to the leg, immediately above the spur. The rapidity of these important expresses may be estimated by the following information obtained from a trainer and proprietor. His pigeons have arrived in London with the news of the winner of the Ascot Cup in fifteen minutes, from the Newmarket in sixty minutes, and from Chichester, bringing the winner of the Goodwood Cup, in one hour and fifteen minutes. At Ascot Races last year, her majesty having expressed a wish to see one of these beautiful birds, a carrier pigeon was thrown, in her majesty's presence, from the grand stand, to the great delight of the spectators, after indulging in sundry gyrations, darted onwards with its winged intelligence to the metropolis.—Court Journal.
