CANDIDATES OF THE FIRST DISTRICT.

The Courier is, in a fair way to convince itself, at least, that Mr. SLIDELL is a man of very superior abilities, and of such commanding acquirements as almost to make it seem absurd for a whig journal to discuss his merits or criticise his pretensions. In the excess of its admiration, and as temporary vent to its transports, it even goes the length of calling him "the great statesman of the Mississippi Valley," and SLIDELL "accessed, a great admiration of talents might induce it to support the latter, though a whig, that in fact it might to such a case made and provided, break through party trammels in the exuberance of its ardent and generous enthusiasm for its admiration and support to Mr. SLIDELL's eulogy genius.

It is with the spirit gratifying to think that the Courier is serious in its laudations of Mr. SLIDELL's magnificent parts, and we would join heart and hand with it in the encomiums there bestowed, were we not constrained to acknowledge the fullness of the conceit of his chef d'œuvre, by inscribing over the figure, this is the man and this the [illegible] SLIDELL and Mr. ROGERS side by side would take quite as intelligible an indication to the observer understand which was the cyclop- and which the pigmy: and we much question if a [illegible] with the two, would not produce a [illegible] the positive injunction of the Koran.

THE QUESTION.

It has been a favorite question of the Courier, quite a hobby, Mr. ROGERS would do if the [illegible] were threatened by such men as Andrew Stevenson. A This enquiry is easy enough answered. Mr. Rogers would say that, the property of the planter, requires protection—and there are fifty millions of dollars invested in sugar plantations which would be lost if the duty on sugar were repealed; that there are nearly 50,000 persons employed in that branch of agriculture, who would be compelled to adopt some other line of business, at great loss, and that by converting the capital engaged in sugar culture to the production of cotton the latter department of agriculture would be deeply and permanently injured by an addition of some four or five hundred thousand bales annually to the already excessive crop of the United States. He would also adduce evidence to show that, if the sugar culture were broken up in Louisiana, Congress would not only be dealing unjustly with the citizens of this State, but also unwisely in respect to the balance of the Union, for sugar would command a higher price in consequence of the deficiency in production, and the people would have to pay more by way of bounty to the foreign grower than they now pay in duty to sustain our domestic labor, and assist our own people.

Now, we ask, if a plain, straight-forward and intelligible Record like this would not have more effect upon congress than Mr. SLIDELL could produce even if he had all the mental pow- [illegible] to him, with his long trade notions about every thing else than sugar? What sort of a figure would he make in Congress, let us ask, contending for 100 per cent import on sugar, as a revenue duty, and against a protective duty upon any thing else! He would have no influence with his democratic confederates of other States, because we have seen that the locofocos every where else than in Louisiana, as the Herald's correspondent honorably admitted, are to a man opposed to this duty; and it is a matter of notoriety that the locofoco candidates for Congress in Southern States even, are making the repeal of the duty an electioneering hobby and will go to Washington pledged against it. With the whig party, these the system the sugar duty on principle, who go in for protecting American agriculture, American manufactures and whatever else is American, what other effect would such a high, sectional and exclusive policy have than to alienate them.

We ask the sugar planter in all seriousness, what he would think of a member of Congress from Kentucky who got up in the House of Representatives and argued in favor of a revenue duty of one hundred per cent upon foreign hemp and was against any duty upon other articles that would assist or succor other sections of the country? Would he not, if a member of Congress, imbibe a special grudge against the hemp duty, and despise a people who were so selfish as to require of Congress a high protection for all it by unanimously [illegible] upon hemp alone? [illegible] would not [illegible] against all other protection? Would not such [illegible] natural consequence of such a narrow and illiberal policy? It seems that the sugar and the planters will readily appreciate the impression that would be made, if they sent a representative to Congress who insisted that a duty of fifty per cent on Havana sugars was only a revenue duty and ought to be continued, whilst a duty of 40 or less per cent on foreign iron, hemp or other products is a protective duty and ought to be repealed. No genius could enforce this doctrine upon Congress, or assist the sugar planter by preaching it up, unless it was so dazzling as to turn every body stone blind who looked upon him—a quality that Mr. SLIDELL's admirers have not yet claimed for him, though it is quite probable they may do so before next Monday.

YUCATAN.—By the brig Magnet, arrived last night from Sisal, which port she left on the 15th inst., we are informed that the Mexican steamers had left for Vera Cruz, and that Gen. Monte's vessels were still at anchor in the port of Campeachy. Sixteen sails were at Lerma, taking off the Mexican troops, which [illegible] setting the different places they had possession of.

☞ THOMAS WHITE and Wm. SHAW were assigned by Recorder Baldwin upon a charge of stealing a box containing about $30 in silver from a house in Gravier street on Saturday night. They were committed for trial before the Criminal Court.

☞ The Pittsburgh American says: "Something new comes to us every day. At Cincinnati, they have commenced the manufacture of a very neat and useful article, of floor and hearth cloth, from hog's bristles or hair. They are first coloured by immersion for a given time in hard oil, and then spun and woven into cloth with the different arrangements of colored colors that fancy dictates."

☞ The Public Examination of the pupils of the Public Schools of the Second Municipality will commence this morning at half past nine, at the several school rooms. The parents and friends of the children and the public generally are invited to attend. The exhibition will continue to be daily interesting.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.—Captain Pierce, of the ship Lowell, at New York, from Canton, reports that the British barque Diana, Capt. May, was blown up at St. Helena by the explosion of her magazine. She had sailed for London. When opposite Ascension Captain May blew his brains out with a pistol, after which she ran round to St. Helena, and while lying at anchor she blew up, killing two and wounding six of the crew. It was supposed the second mate set fire to the magazine.

☞ By the fast running steamer Grey Eagle, we have received through the politeness of the clerk, Louisville papers of the 20th inst.

VOTERS OF THE FIRST AND SECOND DISTRICTS, READ!!!

We have endeavored to demonstrate to the voters of these districts that the [illegible]ness out of the State of Louisiana, were, to a man, opposed to the duty on sugar. Listen to what the Natchitoches Democratic Herald says. That is the leading locofoco journal of the 4th District, and a prominent organ of the dem-cratic party of Louisiana. Read its leading article of June 17th:—

"SUGAR.—This is the great hobby of the whigs.—They say that if $7,000,000 of people will not protect that is, pay more than a good revenue duty, besides about ten per cent protection which is equal [illegible] by reducing it to this country, and saving the expense of importation—that the sugar men will raise the cotton [illegible] by raising cotton. This is a miserable humbug. The sugar growers will get, say how, about thirty per cent protection. As the revenue duty, no one pretends will go below 20 per cent; probably over that. They can raise sugar successfully with this—and if they cannot, why the 300,000 bales of cotton, additional, with which we are threatened, to the 2,400,000 we now make, will have about the same effect on prices as a [illegible] would be all used [illegible] horses to sell, and to [illegible] to market.

And if the 2,400,000 bales now made were reduced in value about [illegible] per pound, would we not make it up by having cheap salt, iron, hemp, nails, cotton, baggage, clothes, and every thing else, while the foreign demand for cotton would be increased, the moment we reduced our ruinous tariffs. This is our answer to the whigs on [illegible] new business profits, that [illegible] about 7,000 voters—of these some 300 may be sugar planters. Can it be presumed that for these gentlemen, who live in palaces, and whose annual profits [illegible] that 6,700 of our own people will submit to such [illegible] duties" on sugar, and on every thing else? No doubt the nominal sub-rents would be lessened were sugar free of duty, but that is [illegible] Thirty per cent is enough, and more [illegible] also men ought not to desire."

We have not [illegible] article quoted.—

Thirty per cent [illegible] amount the Herald is willing to pay, [illegible] Mr. CALHOUN's mode of valuation [illegible] ninths of a cent per pound, and this [illegible] us of that section of the States are [illegible]

When the locofocos of our own State maintain that "THE NATIONAL INTERESTS WOULD BE BETTERED WERE SUGAR FREE OF DUTY," who can wonder that those out of the State should contend for the repeal of the duty. We implore the sugar planters to reflect and be advised in season. They have been warned often—let them take heed or it is too late.

TENNESSEE.—We have more than once alluded to the ardent and active canvass now in progress in Tennessee. The election which takes place in August, is for Governor, members of Congress and the State Legislature. The most desperate efforts are being made by the locos to carry the day, but it is our firm conviction, based on attentive examination of the public press, and on conversation with gentlemen recently from Tennessee, that they will be signally defeated. JONES, the whig candidate for Governor, is one of the ablest and most [illegible] orators in the Union. He follows POLK every where, and as upon the stump more than a match for that veteran locofoco. JONES beat POLK two years ago in the midst of the party [illegible] upon Mr. TYLER's administration, upwards of 2,000 votes. Since [illegible] thoroughly aroused; the [illegible] whig [illegible] alive to the [illegible] prepared to do battle manfully for the [illegible] cause. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
