HE TEXAS NEGOTIATION AND ANDREW

"I learn from a source emitted to the fulles@confidence, as in the about more a Mr. Andrews, deputed by the abolitionites. There is no register with the British flowermoent. There is no register with the British flowermoent. The arm how debetter and embritted his project for the arm how debetter and embritted his project for the arm how always a company to England, who shall advance a won auditional to pay for the about a result to pay for the about a result to pay for the control of the abolition of slavery; and I am authorized by the Texan minister to ave to be a pay to you, that Lord Abordeen has agreed that the British Government will guranty the payment of the British Government will guranty the payment of the British Government will abolish slavery."

Address was in New Orleans on the 21st descriptions. Andrews was in New Orleans on the 21st day of April, to our certain knowledge. He must have gone to Europe, matured his system of action, obtained the patronage of the British Government and with incredible expedition, as three months and a kulf after he was With the solema declaration of the British Govern-ment that the information relied upon by Mr. Ursuaw was fales, and with good reason to suspect that the authority claimed from the Texan Minister for confir-mation of the report, to have been assumed without grounds, the President must have persevered in the egotiation from a purely selfish and sinister impulse fothing short of an ambition reckless of the peace and well being of the country would have precipitated the administration upon so bungling a correspondence, predicted upon representations and assurances which the Department had good grounds for supposing to be thout foundation-or at least such as the Govern without foundation—or at least such as the Government had no means of proving.

The anxiety of the Essecutive to bring forward the measure, in time for the Baltimors Convention, overlooked the proofs necessary to fortify his position, and the people of the United States are thrown by the earn-through the instrumentality of a scamp who was not good sough even for Texas. What might will the statements of Mr. Ursawa's amonymous correspondent have with the civilized world, when brought is not collision with repeated asservations of the British Cabinat—officially promulgated and solemnly reiterated? The Administration must have fallen into the infatuation of believing that the private intention of one of

The Administration must have fallen into the infatu-ation of believing that the private intention of one of its travelling protégés is good against the world and aceds no other support than the credulity of the Presi-dent who has an interest in believing it. Mr. Calmoon attempts to base the Treaty upon the avowal of the British Minister of a desire upon the part of his Government to see alavery abolished wherever it axists, and a determination to aid in that object by all proper and legitimate means. This would indeed place the prefoisions upon less sources a more than the proper and legitimate means. This would indeed place the negotiations upon less equivocal grounds; but it must be borne in unied that this arowal was made after the matter was taken in hand. It was a God-send to Mr. Calascor, and may relieve him from the opproblum of the correspondence preceding his junction with the Catimet. But it can so more extenuate the guilty moutwee of the Executive than it can belt out the disruptable prevarications that were resorted to, to coax the consent of Texas to the Treaty.

This ANDREWE, no doubt, palmed himself upon Mr. Ursatura anonymous correspondent as a wonderful person. The probabilities are that there was no foundation for the disclosures to the Secretary of State than the arrespents of a Texian ratuge, who annead himself by blascosing his own consequence to the awe-struck testa-current of the Cabinet. It will be a stigms upon the character and intelligence of the people, if they auf for the country to be convelsed by so shallow a device.

The Angulary and doubt, plained illustrate upon a proposal care as a wonderful group of the control of the disclosures to the Secretary are so find the disclosures to the Secretary and the secretary of the Cabinat. It will be a significant of the Study of the Cabinat. It will be a significant of the Cabinat. It will be sig
