THE RATIFICATION MEETING.

Never upon any political occasion has so vast a [illegible] been assembled in the city of New Orleans, as that which on Saturday night last, throughout the open area of the "neutral ground" on Canal street, to respond to the nomination of ZACHARY TAYLOR and MILLARD FILLMORE. The preparations for the meeting were on a scale of magnificence commensurate with the high object of the occasion. A vast platform was erected at the corner of Carondelet and Canal streets, capable of sustaining several thousand persons. This was elegantly decorated with flags and evergreens. On each side of the arch, at the back of the platform, were suspended the names of the nominees. A splendid transparency of Old Zack appeared in the centre, surmounting it was the American Eagle, and on either side a brilliant cluster of stars.

At half past seven o'clock, a scene was presented that began description. The roar of cannon and the display of rockets announced that the meeting was ready for organization. At this moment the band struck up "The Star Spangled Banner." The joyous shouts of the immense concourse hailed the emblem of our country's glory. Along the broad space of the neutral ground, countless thousands of spectators extended far, beyond the limits of the square—the pavements on either side were occupied by a dense throng, and the balconies and windows of the adjacent dwellings were radiant with the presence of hundreds of the fair sex. From seven to ten thousand may be indefinitely estimated as the number present; and a more orderly assemblage it has never been our fortune to witness. The respectful silence with which the speakers were heard, was only interrupted by such enthusiastic shouts as indicated whenever the Hero of Buena Vista's name or services were referred to, or mentioned in the most feeble manner. [illegible]

The meeting was called to order by R. F. Slaughter, and [illegible] on motion, supported.
