The Frequency of Murder.

The discovery of the [illegible] in New Orleans has been a [illegible] of astonishment. A [illegible] undetected reproach cast upon our city. We have been accustomed with some appearance of [illegible] and disclaim the imputation of reputation which ignorant and prejudiced people at the North were wont to ascribe to us; and we have contended, not without reason, that New Orleans was as moral, as law-abiding, as safe and as tranquil a city as any that can be met on our Atlantic coast.

The [illegible] of unpleasant pain to perceive [illegible] attributed to our city for the [illegible] as to prevaricate our defence, and to [illegible] to the charges of our enemies. The [illegible] of murder, the most appalling and [illegible] of crimes—has startled and shocked [illegible] sense of the community, and de-[illegible] the prompt and powerful agency of the law [illegible] suppression. Within less than three [illegible] a number of cases of foul assassination [illegible] perpetrated in the dark-[illegible] night, others accomplished [illegible] day, some, the result of [illegible] between incompetent and law-[illegible] others, the deliberate acts of con-[illegible] and vengeance. It has [illegible] and crimes are often [illegible] by a spice of [illegible] fine audacity [illegible] whom for animal art [illegible] are [illegible] become [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
