Russia and Tarkey.
The Foreign news is by no means exhausted, in spite of the copious accounts hitherentiablished in this quarier. We find on examinng Wilmer & Smith and the English journa's fartous trems of intelligence equally interesting d important. A subject that continues to er

Rage the earnest attention of the European Dress is the attitude of Russia towards Turkey the Autocrat is about to assume in the nerous and complicated conflicts which Europ is on the eve of witnessing. From all that we can gather it would appear next to certain that Russia, regardless alike of the obligations of good faith and the magnanimity that should accompany acknowledged strength, intends making a direct effort to good Turkey into war. ing a direct errort to goad larkey into war with the ulimate object of subjugating that empire. In this rapacious and unscriptions design, Russia will probably receive the active coeperation of Assiria, with the understanding that the territory of the Musulman is to be parittioned among the conquerors. The following from the London Globe, of the 13th, will more fully illustrate this view : The intelligence of Bem's victory at Cronstad has excited the general expectation that he will take the direct road to Bucharest, excite the Wallachians against their oppressors, and the Comanh, who are quite ready for it, to take up a tims against Rossen. He is attaining at the Rubicon, and if he crosses it, he will fling a brand whose flames will extend to the Caspian Seas.
