DEATH OF MR. PESCUD.—We were surprised and shocked at hearing yesterday that Mr. P. Scud, of the Picayune, was dead. He was comparatively a young man in the prime of life, and of a healthy constitution that seemed to promise many years of usefulness. He died, we learn, after an illness of nine eight or ten days. Mr. P. Scud was a brother of the editor of the N. Y. Spirit of the Times, and had been for some years a resident of our city. During the whole of this period he was attached to the Picayune newspaper in an editorial capacity. He possessed industry, great readiness and tact, and a capability of endurance in the case of sickness or illness that few men have. Mr. Pescud was generally beloved. His disposition was amiable, his manners unassuming and unique. There was no affectation or mockery in his character. His pen never wrote a line for business was an evident unwillingness, but kind and genial sympathies. He had a fund of it ends to mount incidents, with a verve that will ever be associated with the memory of as genial a spirit as ever toiled in the laborious ranks of journalism.

The remains of Mr. Pescud took place yesterday afternoon, and the mortal remains were attended to the grave by a large concourse of friends who had assembled to pay the last respects to the departed. He was one fed at the Lafayette Cemetery, and in that receptacle of the dead there scarce but a nobler spirit than sleeps in the soil of him whom, with impressive and solemn ceremonies, we saw deposited in the sacred bosom of the departed.

New York, May 16—7 P. M.

The steamer New Orleans arrived last evening at Sandy Hook, 48 hours from Aspinwall, and I am here enabled to state that only twenty-seven cases of Asiatic cholera have occurred on board since yesterday morning. Three of the cases had proved fatal—two of them Mr. Ward, the Board of Health commissioner, and the other a seventy years old passenger. Every possible means to take measures for the streets and purifying the dwellings.

A steamer from Aspinwall says that an investigation had been made in regard to the cause of cholera manifested above, and the deaths were attributed to a poison from some other disease.

The schooner Fair Dealer, of Boston, from Boston, went ashore on Shute's Island, on the 6th of May inst. All hands rescued.

Mobile, May 15.

Important from Camden.

A very exciting time came off in town yesterday, on the question of the address on the Fourth of July. Gen. Gregg said in the heat of debate, that the Queen gave her assent to the Declaration of Independence by every British colonist in America from the south of Nova Scotia to the Mississippi. Gen. Clarke, called on the Speaker of the House to mark the words of the gentleman. He replied there were some words which he could not put down, and which he would not allow to pass. The Tory crowd then began to hiss and yell, when Gen. Gregg, with a pistol in each hand, rushed into the crowd, and threatened to shoot every Britain who dared to hiss him. A rush of alleg ators from the south of the Mississippi.
