THE TWO RAILROAD CONVENTIONS

The New Orleans and Opelousas Railroad Convention which assembled on Friday last, adjourned on Saturday afternoon, at the close of a highly interesting session. The proceedings of this body, composed as it was of the most intelligent, experienced and influential gentlemen from various sections of the State, are particularly gratifying as they evince a thorough determination to push steadily forward the great enterprise for the promotion of which the Convention was called together. The subsidiary resolution offered by General De... and unanimously adopted, affords substantial evidence of the sentiments of the ...

Resolved, That in the opinion of this Convention it is the interest of Louisiana that all railroads projected within the State that are feasible, and will contribute to its general prosperity, and that of the city of New Orleans, should immediately be put in progress, and the Legislature memorialized to enact all necessary laws to encourage the organization of companies and ... etc.

The comments of Mr. Roman on the resolution were brief, indicative of good sense and prudence, and without the slightest pretension to ... eloquence. In order
