NEW YORK Correspondence.

New York, March 10, 1852.
This does not look much like the first day of spring.

The nominal last days of winter were extremely inclement, and March comes in at the source of the lion in the old "Farmer's Almanac."

It is now from last 12 m. on Friday night to early noon of Saturday when it changes to rain, and Saturday night it blows great gales. Both houses playfully closed with doors and windows suffered severely in the vessels which were driven ashore. Mr. Dutton, a Boston merchant, told me he had a bark vessel of Barre, Mass. other vessels in the same condition, and many which are furnishng its quota to the army of adventurers to the "El Dorado," used to be driven ashore, and could not be got off again.

The London Daily News says that in which it was pretty freely reported that the proposed movement might be expected in the month of April, and others offered the idea to be in May, or even June.
