The moral of Congress appears utterly blunted by o the meffable degradation of such cos anctuary of the Fenate that once acrea the treat where contending passions were allused and rebuked by the dignity of manhood, where thought shore reigned supreme, and where the demon of party theord was quelled by the ever watchful instinct of self respect. Yet even the Senate has been polluted by the forted and notions arream that flows from the House measure arrain that flows from the House— Men who have been transposed from one house to the other, have carried with them a rade decrees and brawling temper all manifed to the thereas and brawling temper all mounted to the genus, character and monitors of the Senate-But a few days ago, as zero simulat a discretion of as those of dash occurrence in the House, took place in the Senate. Two of its members edified their colleagues by bandying epithesis of virugeration and interchanging expressions which no gentleman ever employs as was in the last extremity, and when prepared to encounter immediate assault. What a beautiful exhibition it must have been. How pleasant and instructive? How fraught with interest! How charmingly illustrative of the beauties of our Republican system? Mr. Clemens calling Mr. Ras it recorning, by sermore his optioners.

Tamportant to the Third Municipality.

We learn by a telegraphic dispatch from Hatou Rouge, received yeaterday, that a bill introduced by Mr. Solonin, to suspend the collection of the tax of one per cent or real estate and staves, imposed by the Third Municipality council for 1851, has passed both Houses, and received the signature of the Governor. It is important that the authorities and property holders of the third district should be aware of time fact, as further collections are manifestly

We had an opportunity this morning of examining the above named invention and we consider the above named invention and we practically successful. We are not at liberty to say much upon the subject at present, but the experiments which we witnessed where of a character to inspire confidence in the success of the principle, applied even to a distance of 300 miles or more. The hearty of the contrivance is its perfect simplicity.

Mr Seward addressed the Sender in support of his amendment. He maintained that the following propositions were fully established.

I. That the people of Rungary, in the exercise of rights secured to them by the law of nations, in a solemn and leightimate mainter asserted their national independence, and established a rovernment by their own voluntary act, and unconstelly maintained it against all parties have established and results of the second security of the people of lawful right invaded Hungary, and by fraud and armed four subverted the hational independence and political constitution thus established, and thereby reduced that country to the condition of a province ruled by a foreign and absolute power.

3. That although the United States, from the necasities of political society, recognize the existing rule in Hungary, yet they are not indifferent to the surraption and conquest by which it was established.
