SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

Some days ago, we took occasion to remark the evidences of a revival of the Whig party, and the indications of its recovery in the South. We have now seen from influential Northern journals that the evil inflicted by the Northern Whigs has nearly ceased, and that its national character, spiritual and temporal, is now lost. The Whigs are still in existence, but are nothing more than a political party, and are no longer a power in the country.

It would be pleasant to see that we are particularly anxious to witness the triumph of the Whigs in a Political contest, but we are not.

It is to be regretted that we consider the organization as a means of the two greatest parties of the country for the propagation of their views, and the success of those who are in the service of the Republic.

It is to be regretted that the rank and file of the Whigs are influenced by the decaying ideas of a virtuous and healthy party spirit. No real effort is made to dislodge the deadwood, and to renew the spirit of the people.

It is to be regretted that we are especially anxious to see the progress of the downfall of the Whigs, and that we are not equally anxious to see the progress of the Democrats.
