If there be no choice for President by the people, there will necessarily be no choice for Vice-President. The Senate, therefore, will be required to elect a Vice-President by a majority of its members. Constituted as is the Senate, there can be no difficulty what the case. Mr. Reaccurance will, undoubtedly, be elected. So that, should the Husse of Representatives fail to concentrate the woles of sixteen States upon any one of the three candidates whose names will be submitted to it, J. C. Beaccurance will, from and after the fourth day of March, become President of the United States & facts of a part. All this, be it remembered, is predicted of the presumption that the election will be thrown into the House of Representatives.

Mr. Reaccurance is preverbially a fortism the case in the store unlocked and dispense for four years one handered million deliters of patronage, without the store independent of the final transfer on the prevention of the first part of the
