ASPECTS OF THEIR CANVASS.

We perceive by the Northern papers that a large number of the delegates to the North American Convention, assembled the Republican Convention, and that they agreed in nomination persons known to be opposed to the American principles, have withdrawn, and given in their adhesion to FILLMORE and DONELSON. The remainder, constituting a Sham Convention, composed of more than half an representatives, have nominated for the Presidency Mr. Buchanan for President, and Mr. [illegible] for Vice-President.

It is almost difficult to parallel exactly what has occurred. So cordial and practical affiliation could possibly have taken place between the North Americans and the Nigger-worshippers. The former were indeed somewhat imbued with the Abolition principles, but their Americanism was opposed to such doctrine; the latter were determined to extend an invitation to every body [illegible] and to the great mass of the German and other foreign voters of the North in particular. They could not, therefore, consistently with their views extend the slightest encouragement to the American party. Those democrat Americanism, even gingerly or cautiously, would have been to sacrifice the German Freesoil vote. This the Nigger-worshippers couldn't afford, and consequently they preferred parting company with the North Americans.

There is now strong reason to believe that seven-eighths of the members of the American party in the North will sustain Mr. FILLMORE. The tone of Mr. F.'s organs in that section is triumphant. They claim Massachusetts and New York as certain for the American ticket, and say that they stand as equal chance in every Northern State, except perhaps Pennsylvania, which they are disposed to concede to SCHLEMAN, and New Jersey, which Mr. DAYTON's popularity may possibly give to FREMONT. In the South, Kentucky, Maryland, North Carolina, Delaware, Tennessee, and perhaps Arkansas, Missouri, and Louisiana are considered debatable States. On the other hand, the Democrats talk bravely of carrying the entire South, and a large number of Northern States; while the Black Republicans vaunt their strength, and boast that they will sweep the North, North-west, and California. It must be confessed that a more uncertain contest has seldom been witnessed. Thus far, we are inclined to say, with STEPHEN BLACKFOOT, "it's a w a muddle."

Our Nicaragua Correspondence.

The attention of the reader is directed to the letters of our able correspondent in Nicaragua. We have made such arrangements as, we think, will insure the regular reception of his interesting communications. From him may be expected the pure and simple truth; he will "nothing extenuate, or set down aught in malice."

IMPORTANT INTELLIGENCE.—Our Postmaster here has courteously communicated to us the annexed intelligence:

NEW ORLEANS POST OFFICE, June 26, 1856.

GENTLEMEN:—By this morning's mail I received the following information from the Postmaster-General, which you are at liberty to make public.

Very Respectfully,

Your obedient servant,

A. S. MEVITT.

[EXTRACT.]

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
Washington, June 23, 1856.

SIR:—I have the pleasure of announcing to you that the U. S. Mail Steamship Company have made permanent arrangements for for warding the New Orleans mails by the steamers Daniel Webster and Granada, on Aspinwall, direct, on the 7th and 22d of each month.

I am, very respectfully,
your obedient servant,
JAMES CAMPBELL.

ARTHUR S. MEVITT, Esq.,
Postmaster, New Orleans.

THE GRANADA'S NEWS.

CALIFORNIA.

The steamship Granada arrived at an early hour yesterday morning, just as we were going to press, and barely enabling us to give a brief outline of her news on the French side of our paper. The True Californian, of the 5th instant, furnishes the following comprehensive summary:

Events of the Fortnight.

The last steamer that left this port with mails for the Atlantic, and bearing perhaps the most momentous intelligence that ever had issued from the Golden Gate. The announcement of the assassination of the people, and the wresting from the custody of the weak and corrupt authorities the culprits who had stained our streets with the blood of our best friend, fell like a thunderbolt on the East will have been familiar with, before this can reach their eyes. It is our province now to complete the chain of these important events, beginning where the last steamer's news broke off, and bringing it down to the present time.

On the 20th, the day on which Mr. King died, was last, the utmost excitement prevailed. Crowds were collected in the streets and surrounded the rooms of the Vigilance Committee, expecting that the decision would be announced instantly. The military companies were all under arms in the streets, and no disturbance occurred. Nearly every house in the city was draped in black.

The members of the Press, the California Pioneers, and nearly all the different associations and societies had resolutions of condolence and resolutions condoling with the family of the deceased citizen.

The Funeral.

On Thursday, May 22, the funeral of Mr. King took place. It was the largest demonstration of this character that ever was made in this city. The procession reached four miles, and was composed of the most respectable and best people of San Francisco.

Execution of Casey and Cora.

Scarcely had the head of the funeral procession left the city on their way to Lone Mountain Cemetery, when it became known that the guilty cause of the people's grief was about expiating his crime upon the gallows. An immense rush down Sacramento street then took place. Soon some six or eight thousand persons were crowded in view of the windows of the Vigilance rooms, from two of which platforms were built; and a beam, projecting from the roof, too plainly indicated for what purpose these preparations were being made. At half past one o'clock Judge F. [illegible] of Casey appeared, one upon each of these platforms. Casey, the murderer of Mr. King, made a short address to the people, in which he alluded with much feeling to the distress that his fate would occasion his aged mother, living in New York. Up to the close of his speech, he seemed to be pretty firm; at its conclusion, his fortitude gave way, and he had to be supported. Cora, who murdered Mrs. Richardson, exhibited no signs of weakness or fear. He stood with his eyes covered by the fatal cap until Casey's speech was concluded, when the fatal bolt in the trap was severed, and both were launched into eternity.

Burial of Cora.

Cora's body was taken possession of by the Coroner, and afterwards delivered to Belle Cora, a notorious Cyprian, with whom he had been living for years. To whom he was legally married a few minutes before he was hung. She provided him with a most magnificent coffin, and on Saturday, the 24th of May, he was quietly buried.

Casey's Funeral.

Casey's body, after the inquest, was taken by Crescent Engine Company No. 10, of which he had been formerly Foreman, and paid out in state. On Sunday, a long funeral, composed principally of the companions and personal friends of him alive. Followed his remains to the grave. It was said that the cortege numbered about one thousand.

Escape of the Accomplice.

On the 21st, the Grand Jury of the County brought in bills of indictment against Casey, Edward McGowan and Peter Wightman, for the murder of James King, of Casey, the people summarily punished. McGowan, and Wightman they would doubtless treat in the same manner, but that they escaped; and, although every exertion has been made to arrest them, up to the present, they have eluded pursuit. It is hardly possible that they can get out of the country without being detected, however; and, if caught, they will surely swing.

Arrests by the Vigilantes.

On the evening of the 26th May, Billy Carr, Martin Gallagher and Yankee Sullivan were arrested by the Vigilance Committee, and imprisoned in their rooms on Sacramento street. Billy Carr and Martin Gallagher are notorious shoulder hitters, ballot-box stuffers, and executors for hire of the style. The character of Yankee Sullivan is known in three hemispheres. Their arrest caused considerable feeling among their sentimental and sympathizers.

Charge Against Wm. Mulligan.

On Wednesday, the Vigilance Committee having received information that Wm. McGowan, one of the murderers of Mr. King, had called on the barber in a small restaurant on Montgomery street, kept by [illegible]. After a most exciting chase the schooner was overtaken, but Mulligan was not on board.

A Satanic Schoolgirl.

Mr. Thompson Coffin, the overworked editor of the S. F. Herald, is most unfortunate in getting the people out of their jail-rooms. Not long ago from these it happened with false certificates, to assure that over a thousand Mokelumne Hillers, who had left their homes, would return to vote. The majority of this people, [illegible] in the Democratic ticket, and [illegible] Democratic majority at the [illegible] elections. There is little doubt that it has stood more than one political contest.

On Friday, 30th, [illegible] convicted of the murder of [illegible] on the 19th of July last. [illegible] Richardson, and [illegible]
