The marrelous fecundity, mimicry, versatility and brilliancy of M. Sais will not be wondered at when the reader is informed that in his veins flows the blood of not leasthan steen of what may be called the representative nations of Europe. In him you find the bottom of the educated Engishman, the wit of the Milesian, the aturdy application of the Scot, the exmentness of the German, the enthusisms of the Spaniard, the poetic fire and artistic tasts of the Italian, and the fastidiously classic tasts of the Greian. With all the above countries he can claim a blood affinity, and the intellectual essence of each is reproduced in the best manner, as his printed reams of thought, sonitered every where, will show.
